That Walk Through the Wheat.

Together we walked in the evening time,
Down on the dim and dewy lea;
And he bent his head and looked in my eyes,
As if he held one of all most dear.
O, it was sweet in the evening time!

And our pathway went through fields of wheat,
Narrow that path and rough the way.
But he was near and the birds sang loud
And the stars came out in the twilight gray.
O, it was sweet in the evening time!

Softly he spoke of the days long past,
Softly, of blessed days to be;
Close to his arm, as we walked, I pressed,
The nor-field path was filled to me.
O, it was sweet in the evening time!

Gently the thistles and grass over still,
The rude stiffed home through the purple shade,
The sighing sedges sang where the thorns stood high.
As we walked with him in the woodland glade.
O, it was sweet in the evening time!

And the latest gleams of day light died;
My hand in his he folded last;
We stepped out the door from the wheat as we paused,
Ere narrower, narrower wound the way.
O, it was sweet in the evening, time!

He bended to the depth of my eyes, and said;
"I love and I believe in thee, my dear!"
But for their well walk through the fields of life
Close as we walked through the fields of wheat.

—Good Words.

A signal service to weak womankind is the finding of lost health—the building up of a run-down system. Nothing does it so surely as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures all the derangements, irregularities and weaknesses peculiar to the sex. It's the most perfect of strengthgivers, imparting tone and vigor to the whole system. For overworked, debilitated teachers, milliners, seamstresses, "shop-girls," nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

"Favorite Prescription" gives satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it is promptly refunded. That's the way it's sold; that's the way its makers prove their faith in it. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage. Purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Prop'rs, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.
