NCC President To Speak Here

One of the world's leading figures in the Protestant church will speak in Birmingham on March 30.

The Rev. Eugene Carson Blake, president of the National Council of Churches, will speak at the First Presbyterian church at a 7:45 p.m. program in the sanctuary. The meeting will be open to the public.

Dr. Blake was among the group of clergy who visited the troops in Korea and other Far Eastern countries last Christmas. His topic here will deal with his experiences at that time.

★ Smile a Minute...

A man was leaving his house for business. Suddenly the door opened and his wife called:

"George! Wait a minute. Don't forget to leave the money for that roast you ordered."

"Money, money, money, all the time!" stormed George. "What a spender you are! When I'm dead, I guess you'll have to beg."

"Well, I'll be better off at that," replied the wife, "than some poor women who have never had any practice."

ANTICIPATION of the feminine angle in future university football games is demonstrated by Birmingham's Jane Wallace, cheerleader at Mt. Union College, Alliance, Ohio. Holding the ball is Coach Nelson Jones, who believes that increasing television coverage of games may make the entertainment value of girl place-kickers as important as touchdown-scoring fullbacks.
