Mitchell's Castorena!

HOW IS IT MADE?

It is made in this manner Wormseed, Pumpkin Seed, Senna, Rhubarb, Rochelle Salts, Potassium Bi Carb., Anise, Wintergreen and Peppermint all mixed together in the most scientific manner according to therapeutics. This delightfully agreeable preparation we have designed for use in most cases of children where medicine is needed. Its composition renders it absolutely harmless and our skillful preparing makes it pleasant to take. Contains no opiates and is a certain cure for constipation, disordered stomach and the many little ailments arising from improper feeding or other causes. Aids digestion, corrects sour stomach, regulates the bowels and allows rest for the child when other means fail. Full directions accompany each bottle. It is unquestionably the best medicine for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it mothers have something which is absolutely safe, pleasant to take, and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

this you will know that this medicine is compounded of active principles of roots and plants, which are chemically extracted so as to retain all their medicinal qualities.

Its action is expectorant, tonic, antiseptic, sedative, diaphoretic, and diuretic, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus, changes the secretions and excites the blood, health, in a stated parts, gives strength to the digestive organs, brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect that it is warranted to break up the most distressing Cough in a few hours' time, if not of too long standing. It is warranted to give entire satisfaction even in the most confirmed case of consumption. It is warranted to contain no opium in any form and will not affect the head or produce costiveness. It is warranted to be perfectly harmless to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system.

Bad Case of La Grippe Quickly Cured.

All Dangerous Consequences Avoided.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure Does the Work.

It Acts Like Magic—Speedy and Permanent Cure the Result.

PNEUMONIA PREVENTED.

A few weeks ago the editor was taken with a very severe cold that caused him to be in a most miserable condition. It was undoubtedly a bad case of la grippe and recognizing it as dangerous he took immediate steps to bring about a speedy cure. From the nature of the case it was necessary to procure the very best and most speedy cure. From the advertisement of Shiloh's Consumption Cure and the many good recommendations included therein, we concluded to make a first trial of the medicine. To say that it was satisfactory in its results, is putting it very mildly, indeed. It acted like magic and the result was a speedy and permanent cure. We have no hesitancy in recommending this excellent remedy to anyone afflicted with a cough or cold in any form. Its use has proved a paying investment—through a thorough and speedy cure—to us and we are sure all who use it according to directions will find it to be what we claim. Shiloh's remedies are all good—at least that is the reputation they have around here.—The Examiner, Vincent, N. J.

The great danger from the grip as well as a severe cold is from its tendency to result in pneumonia. Shiloh's Consumption Cure prevents this.

The above remedy is manufactured by S. C. Wells, Leroy, N. Y., and sold in Birmingham by Whitehead & Mitchell.

Succeeded When Others Failed

A GRATEFUL PIONEER OF JACKSON, MICH., RELATES AN INTERESTING EXPERIENCE.

Near Death's Door Twice Before Given Up by Doctors, But Saved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

From the Industrial News, Jackson, Mich.

The readers of the Jackson Industrial News have often expressed their gratefulness and satisfaction with its course in keeping them posted on all important inventions and discoveries, and it has always been our aim to particularly note such facts in the development of science, which may be of benefit to the ever-growing circle of Industrial News readers. We were lately informed by several friends that Mr. Jacob Paskle, residing at 111 Union street, Jackson, Mich., who has lived in this city for over twenty-eight years, and is now 69 years old, had a marvellous escape from death or at least a long lingering sickness by reading one of the descriptions of wonderful cures accomplished through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. The first practical acquaintance Mr. Paskle had with the Pink Pills was two years ago, when he suffered a severe attack of rheumatism, and after trying other remedies and his family physician's prescriptions without avail, he tried Pink Pills, and before quite using two boxes was entirely relieved.

About eight months ago Mr. Paskle caught cold, and his rheumatism returned, but much severer and accompanied by indigestion and intense pain in the stomach. His faithful wife called in the family physician, who pronounced it a case of la grippe, combined with stomach trouble, and said on account of Mr. Paskle's advanced age he could not cure him, all he could do would be to give him something to relieve his pain. Mr. Paskle was not satisfied, and tried several other remedies recommended, but he got no relief. Of course, he had been cured of rheumatism about a year and a half previously by the use of Pink Pills, but as this was the la grippe and stomach trouble combined with his former disease, he thought it required different remedies to cure it.

The pain Mr. Paskle was suffering was something only a person having been afflicted with the combination of painful diseases can imagine. He became so sensitive that he would scream if anyone would even touch his bed.

At last, after suffering for months and trying nearly all other remedies recommended to him, he made up his mind to at least cure his rheumatism, and he began taking Pink Pills again. After the use of two boxes he found to his great joy that he was not only relieved of his rheumatism, but the grippe and the stomach trouble had also entirely disappeared. Mr. Paskle is now enjoying good health and can eat any food, even sour pickles, which is one of his favorite relishes, and the use of even the smallest part of one would heretofore cause him trouble. This wonderful recovery at his advanced age, after his physician had given him up (the name of the physician can be obtained by applying to Mr. Paskle), and after trying all other remedies recommended, shows the healing properties in Pink Pills are far greater than ever claimed for them, and he thought it his duty to relate his experience through this paper for the benefit of suffering humanity.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Med. Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

MRS. GOOLD'S GRATITUDE.

Her Story of How She Was Restored to Health.

Condition Before and After the Birth of Her Child.

From every city, town and hamlet on this vast continent, come letters from suffering women; from those whose physicians have been unable to assist them, or from that numberless class whose confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's advice and the curative properties of her Vegetable Compound is unbounded. Every letter received from women is recorded, and hundreds of volumes of cases treated aid in furnishing information for the women of to-day. No letters are published without the request of the writer, and the strictest confidence is observed. The following letter represents thousands:—

"I always enjoyed good health until six months before the birth of my babe. Then I was very weak; my back ached all the time. My physicians said I would be all right after the birth of the child, but I was not; although at that time I had the best of care. The pains in my back were almost unbearable. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form; menstruations were painful.

"Any work or care would entirely unnerve me. When my babe was 11 months old, friends persuaded me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I had taken one bottle I felt the effects. My back did not ache so badly, and I felt stronger. After taking four bottles I felt well. My ambition returned, menstruations were painless, leucorrhœa entirely cured, and I could take care of my babe and do my housework. I shall always recommend your Vegetable Compound for all women, especially for young mothers."—Mrs. H. L. Goold, Oregon, Wis.

If Mrs. Goold had been well before the birth of her child, subsequent suffering would have been avoided. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should always be taken before and after birth, in order that the system may withstand the shock.

OUR OWN NOVELS

BY MRS. ALEXANDER CONWAY

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

But that day, and other days, passed without any feeling or sign of him. I spent nearly all the hours of daylight on the coast. Again and again I went through the scene which I had pictured. I stood a few paces from him, on a stretch of sand. I reproached him, and exulted in the vengeance which I was about to take. I could see myself raise my right hand, and fire. I could see the man fall lifeless. Over and over again during those weary hours of waiting I acted my part in this drama.

I gloried in the thought that he was now famous that life held great prizes which his hand could grasp. He had cut short my dream of joy. I could do even more to him. I could kill him when the ball of success and ambition was at his feet. In the first flush of his triumph he would find me waiting for him. Oh, it was well I had been cardy in my acts! I could now take far more than life from my foe!

So day after day I sat or lay on the coast, full of such thoughts as these. Except when looking for my foe, I spent all my time in my own room. Day after day went by, but we met not. I supposed him to be away from home. No matter. I could wait a month, a year, ten years. Had I not sweet thoughts wherewith to while away the time? I made no more inquiries about him. I was afraid he might hear of them, and guess who wanted him. I waited calmly and patiently.

CHAPTER VIII.

ONE morning I stayed later than usual in my room, glancing through my window, which looked upon the broadest part of the village street and through the village. I saw that St. Seurin was in such festival guise as it could assume. Men, women, and children were standing about, dressed in holiday clothes. Then I remembered that the girl who waited upon me had said something about to-day being a great festival of the Church. I had given little heed to her words. I watched the crowd for a few minutes, and presently saw a sight which had my mood been happier, would have delighted me. Girls and boys came, bearing tall wicker baskets full of leaves, pulled from various flowers and green shrubs. The sandy space in front of me was cleared. A young man ran nimbly from point to point, tracing as he went lines in the dust. Then, seizing the baskets, one after another, he distributed their growing contents in such a way that in less than twenty minutes what looked like a carpet of a variegated pattern, formed of flowers, covered the dusty space.

As he hastily threw the last splash of crimson roseleaves into its place, the procession of priests, acolytes, and choristers appeared. It passed on the fair carpet, and some ceremony, such as blessings, was gone through. Every hat was doffed, every knee was bent, all save one. There, on the outskirts of the crowd, with head uncovered, in deference to others, but standing erect, I saw the tall form of Eustace Grant.

He had returned! A thrill of delight ran through me as I gazed on the hated features of the man who had robbed me of all I cared for. I drew back into the room, and watched him through my window. My time had come.

The procession resumed its march. The people followed it, most likely to the church. The space was all but deserted. The various hues of the flower carpet were now blended together without order or pattern. Grant replaced his hat, crossed the road, and struck down a path which could only lead to the sea. I laughed as I saw him disappear.

With a grim deliberation I threw open the barrels of my pistols, and loaded them afresh. The lack of precaution on my part should add to the escape of my enemy. Then I sat down and waited. I wanted him to have a fair start, so that our meeting might take place as far up that deserted coast as possible.

When I thought I had given him sufficient grace, I sallied forth in pursuit. I turned down to the sea as he had turned. I rounded the foot of the hill which sheltered St. Seurin from the nor'-west winds, then stood with the unbroken cliff on my right hand, and the sand stretching away in front of me for miles and miles. In the distance I could see him—a white spot on the yellow sand. The heat was great; so he had clothed himself in dazzling white garments. He was, perhaps, half a mile in front of me, walking near the edge of the sea. I quickened my steps and rapidly diminished the distance between us.

I did not want to go so near, if he turned, he might recognize me. I did not mean to overtake him. I meant to follow him until he turned off or trace his steps, then, as soon as he liked, he might discover me. My only fear was that some path up the cliff might, unknown to me, exist—a path that he might take, and so go home across the table-land.

Grant walked leisurely, so I was soon within three hundred yards of him. I noticed that his head was bent forward, as is natural to those who think as they walk. His hands were behind him, and he paced the coast with a slow, but lengthy stride. Little he guessed who was upon his traces!

Suddenly he turned aside, and struck up the beach toward the cliff. I stood still and watched him. I saw him reach the top of the beach; then, as it were, disappear into the face of the cliff. I doubled my pace and hurried on, laughing in vengeful glee. I had him now! For by this time I knew every foot of that coast line. I knew that at the spot where Grant had vanished some convulsion of nature had torn the rocks apart; that entering through what looked like a narrow fissure, you came upon a straight smooth space, bounded by unscalable crags, and carpeted by a soft white sand. Not a cave, because it was open, to the heavens; but all the same a natural cul de sac.

I had found this place. I had explored it. I had even longer than Eustace Grant might be in there, while I stood at the entrance and held him like a rat in a trap. And now the thing I longed for had come to pass. Perhaps to escape from the heat of the sun my enemy had chosen the one place in which I wished to meet him.

I was right in saying that fate was shaping everything to my hand. How I should face him, force him to fight, and slay him! I had him now!

Strange to say, no thought of an issue adverse to myself entered my head. So confident, so certain I felt, that I paused for a while at the entrance of the trap, and steeled my heart by recalling all the wrongs which I had suffered. I stood there until the sun made the barrel of the pistol, which I had drawn from my breast, as hot as fire.

Then I crept between the two rocks, and went to reckon up with Eustace Grant!

The change from the brilliant sunshine to the cool gloom of the grot, or whatever it should be called, was so sudden that for a moment I could not distinguish objects. When, my eyes grew accustomed to the shade, I saw that Grant was lying on a heap of sand at the farthest end of the fissure. His broad-brimmed hat was by his side, and he seemed fast asleep. I crept toward him. My feet made no sound as they trod on the soft dry sand. I stood over him and looked down on his powerful face, strong, sun-burned neck, and large, muscular limbs. He looked the type of manhood. All! no wonder he could win a woman's love if he strove for it!

A note took lay near his left hand. Most likely he had been jotting down something which struck his fancy, when the grateful shade and the murmur of the distant sea had lulled him to pleasant sleep from which he would awake only to sleep again forever. Nay, I might have placed the muzzle of the pistol next his heart, and have sent him, without awakening, from one sleep to another. But I had no intention of murdering the man in cold blood; nor would it have suited me for him to die without knowing to whom his death was due. Besides I meant it to be a fair duel—a duel to the death between us. So I stopped, and I laid one of my pistols near his right hand; then I walked back toward the mouth of the grot, leaned against a rock, and waited for him to awake.

Not for a moment do I attempt to disguise the devilish, vengeful feelings which could urge me in this calm manner a sight which, had my mood been happier, would have delighted me. Girls and boys came, bearing tall wicker baskets full of leaves, pulled from various flowers and green shrubs. The sandy space in front of me was cleared. A young man ran nimbly from point to point, tracing as he went lines in the dust. Then, seizing the baskets, one after another, he distributed their growing contents in such a way that in less than twenty minutes what looked like a carpet of a variegated pattern, formed of flowers, covered the dusty space.

THE HEROES OF '76.

"The Woods of Shenan."

Leaving the highway by a pretty lane, we are presently in a most magnificent wood, a vast cathedral of nature's columns, five tall dark trunks of elm-trees, supporting leafy, interseeting arches of golden green; its nave and transepts are carpeted with the softest moss, in which a footfall is silent; its screens are of hawthorn and honeysuckle; its chancel is strewn with the growing violets; and its chapels are adorned with rhododendron and ivy, hung from and upon it, all floods the softened sunlight; over our heads sings a vast choir of birds; and around us the melodious hum of the bees sounds like soft organ notes. Here and there in the woods we come upon hallsome, russet-plumaged pheasants strutting about, rabbits hopping fearlessly across the clearings, and squirrels scampering from tree to tree."—"A Stroll in the Garden of England," by Lieut.
