ROYAL OAK RUMBLINGS.

EDITED AND CONDUCTED BY ARTHUR W. CAMPBELL

Subscriptions Received and Advertising Contracted for in this Paper by the Agent, Arthur W Campbell, of Royal Oak.

Miss Julia Russell has been quite ill.

School is to begin Monday in the high room.

Apple packers and apple sellers are no scarcity in this fair land.

Supervisor Decker is at Pontiac doing his duty as Royal Oak's representative.

The Hazel park Sunday school begins at 2.30 p. m. instead of 3.30 as formerly.

George Wilcox has for some time been prostrated with typhoid fever, but is now some better.

The Rev. Mr. Barker will preach in the Hazel park school house next Sunday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock. All are requested to attend.

We notice our item in regard to H. P. Beck's squashes was copied into many of our exchanges, and some say it squashes everything else for this season.

The Wayne County Courier has secured the services of some Royal Oaker as its correspondent. Unless we are mistaken it is some young lady, but it is only guess-work.

The thanks of the Y. P. L. S. are due to the Misses McDowall for their hospitality and the excellent manner in which they entertained the young people at the social last Friday evening.

Farmers report a fairly average yield of corn this season, and quite a little that is soft. It is quite liable to mould and spoil when too much is placed in a pile with a lack of sufficient air.

Mr. Ferguson, a highly recommended young man, is to begin as principal of the high school on Monday next, if circumstances do not prevent, and a season of prosperity and benefit is most earestly desired.

The funeral of a Mrs. Littell of Detroit was held at the M. E. church last Sabbath at 2 p. m. She had been staying at Mrs. J. Raymond's a week, when a lingering illness of consumption caused her death. Rev. B. B. Rogers officiated.

During all our short life we never heard of such great pumpkins, squashes, sunflowers and all other vegetables as this past season has produced. Our exchanges abound in phenominally fine yields of grain and extravagant stories of huge vegetables, and we are not one whit behind.

Raging robbers ruthlessly ransack rooster residences 'round righteous rearers of really rare, remarkable reptile resembling Royal Oak Republicanwobbins, but which the Greenfielders, from whom they are stolen, delight in nicknaming "hens and roosters." The offenders have not been captured or even detected.

The comp. got the social last week for the U. P. S. S. instead of the Y. P. L. S., two different organizations. Guess we shall have to kill him. Mitchell said we might if he made mistakes. [Mistakes will happen in the best of families. But alas! poor scribe! My blunderbus is loaded with six pounds of unassorted "pi," and when you come up here I will have my little "broom and dead-stone" ready to gather up your badly "piled form." Comp.]

U. PRECINCT.

Denis Cuick is seriously ill.

E. A. Starr is erecting an addition to his barn.

The infant son of Frank Knowles died October 25.

Will Reade of Detroit spent last week at Springstein's.

Judd R. Waters spent Sunday with his cousin, Walter Lee.

The U. P. Church is soon to have a thorough overhauling.

S. J. Martin of Detroit spent Sunday with Mr. McGouldrich.

Johnathan Todd is very low from injuries received by falling from a wagon recently.

Alex Solts and wife were visiting at Mr. Reid's last Thursday night, and during their absence some one entered the house and carried off some jewelry and $5 in money.

What a Higher Education Means.

When a "higher education" is demanded, for any class of persons—as women—it means that it has become desirable to train their faculties for more difficult work than that traditionally assigned to them, and also that it is desirable to enable them to get more enjoyment out of any work that they do. The necessary correlative of the possession of powers is the opportunity for their exercise. The existence of a larger class of effectively educated women must increase their demand for a larger share in that part of the world's work, which requires trained intelligence. Of this, literature and other arts are one and only one portion. The work of the professions, of the upper regions of industry, commerce, and finance, the work of scientific and of political life, is the work appropriate to the intelligences which have proved themselves equal to a course of training at once complex and severe. A person defined to receive a superior education is expected to develop more vigorous mental force, to have a larger mental horizon, to handle more complex masses of ideas, than another. From the beginning, therefore, he must not merely receive useful information, but be habituated to perform difficult mental operations, for only in this way can the sum of mental power be increased. The order, arrangement, and sequence of the ideas he acquires must be as carefully planned as is the selection of the ideas themselves, because upon this order and internal proportion his mental horizon depends. He must be trained in feats of sustained attention, and in the collocation and association of elementary ideas into complex combinations. Since ideas are abstractions from sense-perceptions, he must be exercised in the acquisition of accurate, rapid, far-reaching, and delicate sense perceptions, in their memorization, and in the representative imagination which may recall them at will, and be able to abstract from them, more or less remotely, ideas. Habits of rich association of ideas must be formed, and of pleasure in their contemplation. And very early must be offered to the child problems to be solved, either by purely mental exertion, or by that combined with manual labor.—From "An Experiment in Primary Education," by Dr. Mary Putnam-Jacobi, in Popular Science Monthly for August.
