SUPREME IN BEAUTY

GREAT PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION AT BUFFALO.

An Enterprise of Vast Proportions and Unparalled Magnificence, Illustrating Progress in the Western Hemisphere During the Nineteenth Century.

As a beautiful spectacle, the Pan-American Exposition will surpass any former enterprise of its character. It will delight and satisfy the eye, and memory will long retain the picture presented. The style of architecture is a free treatment of the Spanish Renaissance, and the architects have made the most of the opportunity to enhance its picturesqueness. The buildings are covered with staff, which is molded into thousands of fanciful shapes, and color is used with such excellent effect as to evoke the name of "Rainbow City" for the ensemble of Exposition palaces. It is the first attempt to produce a harmonious color scheme at an exposition, and is a grand success. Sculpture adds greatly to the effect. Majestic statues and colossal groups adorn the architecture of the buildings, and in open courts. There are more than 125 of these grand works, by the most noted sculptors of America. The court settings are superb. They take up more than 2 acres, approximately two and a half times greater than the area of the courts of the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago. The hydraulic and fountain effects are of a superior order. In all the courts are large pools of water into which hundreds of fountains throw their sparkling streams. In all the courts and upon the grounds outside the buildings are very elaborate horticultural and garden effects. The floral display is exceedingly fine. Nothing which might contribute to make a scene of loveliness has been overlooked or omitted by the builders of the Exposition City.

With all its wonderful beauty by day, the Exposition will be like the Cereus of Tropical Jamaica, a flower of the night. Then will it blossom in exquisite perfection. With all the fountains playing amid floating lights upon every golden, rippling pool; with the great cascade shooting in volumes forth from its niche on the Electric Tower, which rises to a height of 391 feet; with more than 200,000 electric lights fringing every building and giving to every jet and ripple of water a fantastic iridescence, with music lending the charm of sweet sound to the harmony of color and motion; with flowers, foliage and fountains, the evening scenes at this Exposition will be such as no lover of the beautiful will permit to pass without at least one determined effort to witness them.

An electric display, the like of which has never yet been seen, is planned, and this will be possible on account of the nearness of the great plants which have harnessed Niagara and put its tremendous power to commercial use.

The sum of $10,000,000 has been expended to provide a magnificent spectacle and illustrate the achievements of the nineteenth century. The Midway alone cost $3,000,000, and the variety of novelties and their quality excel the features of any former amusement enterprise at an exposition.

Music is an important feature of the Exposition. The magnificent Temple of Music, which has a seating capacity of 2,200, contains one of the largest and finest pipe organs ever constructed in America, built to order at a cost of $15,000. Entertainments of a high order of excellence will be given in the Temple. In the bandstands in the Music Gardens and elsewhere on the grounds concerts will be given by Sousa's Band of 100 pieces, the Mexican Government Band of 67 pieces, and other famous musical organizations.

In all the exhibit divisions the Pan-American is very complete. It is the aim of the Exposition to show the progress of the nineteenth century in the Western world. The exhibits are gathered from all the principal states and countries of the Western Hemisphere and the new Island possessions of the United States government. No stone has been left unturned by the officers of the Exposition in their efforts to bring together exhibits of exceptional merit, and of the highest educational value. The divisions, each of them a considerable exhibition in itself, are as follows: Electricity and electrical appliances, fine arts, practical arts, liberal arts, machinery, graphic arts, typography, lithography, steel and copper plate printing, photo-mechanical process, drawing, engraving and book engineering, public works, constructive architecture, hygiene and sanitation, music and the drama, ethnology, archæology, progress of labor and invention, isolated and collective exhibits, agriculture, food and their accessories, agricultural machinery and appliances, horticulture, viticulture, live stock, horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, forestry and forest products, fish, fisheries, fish products and apparatus for fishing, mines and metallurgy, ordnance, military and naval, transportation exhibits, railways, vessels and vehicles, ordnance. The Exposition grounds are in the northern part of Buffalo, adjacent to the large and beautiful Delaware Park. They are about one mile in length from north to south, and a half a mile wide. There are 350 acres, including 122 acres of improved park lands and lakes.

Entering the grounds by way of the Lincoln Parkway, the visitor obtains a magnificent view of the picture presented. In the foreground, on the south side of the Park, is the Lake Front portion of Delaware Park, one of the finest parts of Buffalo, with the Park Lake, the North Bay, a portion of the Lake Erie and south of it, the Lake Front Park, with the Lake Erie and the Canadian shore in the distance. The Exposition Administration Building, which is a beautiful permanent structure, is on the left of John J. Albright of Buffalo to his fellow-citizens and contains about $100,000. North of the bay is the New York State Building, also a permanent structure of marble. These two buildings are in the style of Greek temples, one containing reminders of the Parthenon, and the other resembling the Erechtheum upon the Acropolis at Athens.

Between the North Bay and the lake, the city of Buffalo has built at large expense a new and beautiful bridge of heavy masonry, known as the Bridge of the Three American. This bridge carries the broad thoroughfare which leads from the main southern entrance to the approaches of the Exposition. On the northern shore of the lake is situated the life-saving station erected by the government. Upon the southern bank of the lake, a beautiful casino and boat-house has also been built by the city of Buffalo for Exposition uses.

The symmetrical grouping of buildings will be at once noted by the observer. Beginning at the formal approach, just north of the lake, the eye follows northward between two rows of ornamental columns to what is known as the Forecourt. East of this are the State and Foreign Buildings, forming in themselves a very interesting feature of the Exposition. Near these, also are the buildings for special ordinance displays. West of the Forecourt are the outdoor literal displays and the Women's Building. We cross now the Triumphal Bridge, remarkable for its tall pylons, ornamented with statues, on either side of the Lake. The bridge forms a part of the Grand Canal, more than a mile in length, which surrounds the main group of buildings. We come next to the Esplanade, which is nearly two-thirds of a mile long and 120 feet wide. The western end of the Esplanade is enclosed by the Horticulture, Graphic Arts, and Mines Buildings. The eastern end is shut in by the government group of three large buildings. Sixteen gardens with elaborate fountains and many groups of sculpture occupy the two arms of the Esplanade, and the decorative features throughout this broad space are very numerous and beautiful. North of the Esplanade is the Court of Fountains, with the Ethnology Building on the right and the Music Building on the left. Two subordinate courts also open into the Esplanade from the north, the one on the east being known as the Court of Cypresses and the one on the west as the Court of Lilies. Beyond the Court of the Ethnology Building, on the right, and fronting upon the Court of Fountains, is the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, and on the opposite side the Machinery and Transportation Buildings. In the Court of Fountains, which is 2,000 feet long, with its two arms, and containing many beautiful fountains. Proceeding still northward, we come to the Mall, a broad avenue, half a mile long, extending from the eastern to the western gate of the Exposition. The west is given over to the Agriculture Building, the Electricity Building, and on the left the Electricity Building. We now arrive at the most conspicuous feature of the Exposition, the massive Electric Tower. This tower stands between the Court of Fountains and the Plaza, in a broad Esplanade, about two acres in extent. Immediately north of the Electric Tower is the Plaza with its beautiful sunken gardens and land-stand in the center, the Propylæa or monumental entrances at the north, the entrance to the Stadium at the east, and the entrance to the Midway on the west.

The Exposition will open May 1, and continue for six months.

War on Microbes

Their Destruction Has Noticeably Lengthened Human Life.

That the length of a man's life is much greater now than it was half a century ago is shown by statistics notwithstanding all the talk of the good old days. Millions of years have been added to the aggregate number lived by man. These years have been gained mainly by the war on microbes. So long as the microbe was unknown as the cause of nearly all disease medicine was mere guesswork, while surgery was in many cases butchery. The discovery of antiseptics revolutionized surgical operations. In medicine, too, the advance has been astonishing. Many diseases have been practically driven out of the country. The terrible typhus fever—known as a "fever disease" which means a microbe disease—used to kill our forefathers of the early part of the century at the rate of 8,000 to 10,000 per 43,000,000. Now it kills less than 80 individuals—a saving of 8,000 or 9,000 lives every year. If smallpox were as bad now as it was half a century ago, it would kill 9,000 people this year. But in reality it will kill less than 100, and perhaps not half of that number. When cholera tried to force its way in, a few years ago, we drove it off with the greatest ease. But if things were in the state they were in in 1849, it would have carried off 130,000 of us. In dozens of disease the same saving of life has been effected. Scarlet fever, if it were as destructive now as it was 40 years ago, would kill 41,000 people. It won't actually carry off one-sixth of that number. Even diphtheria has been brought under control.

Two Royal Old Maids.

The only two royal spinsters in Europe are namesakes and granddaughters of Queen Victoria, whose aversion to unmarried ladies of marriageable age is most pronounced. So great is her antipathy to unmarried women, the state of single blessedness of the Princess Victoria of Wales and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein has been the cause of many royal family jars. Seriously as the parents and grandparents may threaten and rip, there remains little or no possibility of the two spinsters finding mates. Princess Victoria of Wales reached her thirty-second birthday in the spring, and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein will never see thirty again, and in spite of their deplorable, conspicuous and unnatural singleness, they are not the most unhappy of royal born ladies. They are fast friends and allies, and though they enjoy few of the same studies and pleasures, they are equally callous in their estimate of the worlds and even grandmother's opinion, and equally determined to prove that the life of an unwedded princess is neither forlorn nor unprofitable.

The only way of setting the will free is to deliver it from wilfulness. Hardness of the Esplanade is enclosed by the Horticulture, Graphic Arts, and Mines Buildings. The eastern end is shut in by the government group of three large buildings. Sixteen gardens with elaborate fountains and many groups of sculpture occupy the two arms of the Esplanade, and the decorative features throughout this broad space are very numerous and beautiful. North of the Esplanade is the Court of Fountains, with the Ethnology Building on the right and the Music Building on the left. Two subordinate courts also open into the Esplanade from the north, the one on the east being known as the Court of Cypresses and the one on the west as the Court of Lilies. Beyond the Court of the Ethnology Building, on the right, and fronting upon the Court of Fountains, is the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, and on the opposite side the Machinery and Transportation Buildings. In the Court of Fountains, which is 2,000 feet long, with its two arms, and containing many beautiful fountains. Proceeding still northward, we come to the Mall, a broad avenue, half a mile long, extending from the eastern to the western gate of the Exposition. The west is given over to the Agriculture Building, the Electricity Building, and on the left the Electricity Building. We now arrive at the most conspicuous feature of the Exposition, the massive Electric Tower. MRS. ANDERSON'S ODD PENSION

Mrs. Charles Z. Anderson of Toledo, O., has secured a pension of $5 a month on account of the death of her husband, who was a cavalryman in the United States navy. The funny thing about it is that she killed the man for whose death the government now gives her a pension. He had been drinking and abused her while she was getting dinner. He attacked her with a revolver. She attempted to get possession of it and in the struggle laid hold of his leather watch chain, which he wore around his neck, where it was fastened with a slip knot. She jerked it pretty hard and strangled him.

Insects Which Attack Books.

Two prizes of 1,000 francs each and a third of 500 francs have been offered by anonymous donors, according to the Courrier du Livre, for the best essays on "The Insects which attack books and the best means of destroying them."

ROMANCE OF A GRAVE.

In the end of a deep railroad cut in Georgia, near the town of Altoona, on the line of Sherman's march to the sea, is a soldier's grave. The simple headstone bears this inscription: "He died for the cause he thought was right." For more than thirty-five years the Western & Atlantic Railroad company, leasing the state road from Georgia, has kept this nameless grave in repair.

O. W. Rowe, of Jackson, Mich., says:—I had varicocele in the secondary stage and two strictures of 8 years standing. I was operated on twice, undergoing great suffering, but could get temporary relief. I was finally advised to try the New Method Treatment of Drs. K. & K. The enlarged veins disappeared in six weeks, the stricture tissue was removed in eight weeks and my sexual energy and vitality returned so I was a man in every respect. I recommend you doctors with my whole heart."
