FOUR MURDERS IN MICHIGAN

A Crazy Son's Horribly Brutal Deed Near Wayne County House.

A SORROWFUL JOURNEY HOME.

The Funeral of the Late Ex-Governor—Mr Crapo's Third Class Cars—The Wabash State Taxes Paid—Homer Bliss Confesses. Other Michigan News.

The Bliss Murder.

The body of Charles Bliss, the German farmer who disappeared from his home three weeks ago was found Sunday near his home in Washington. There seems to be no question that the old man was murdered. Acting upon this theory the local authorities placed Homer Bliss, a son, aged 28 years old, under arrest. He is now locked up in jail at Mt. Clemens, pending the result of the inquest. Old man Bliss disappeared from home on Sunday, June 9. The first known of his disappearance was when his wife and son made inquiry of the Detroit police concerning him. They said there had been a little family quarrel on Sunday, and that he left the house in a rage. They did not think anything about it until they found in a desk a note, presumably written by the missing man, but not signed, in which it was stated that the writer had gone to Detroit to drown himself in the Detroit river. The people in this village and vicinity are stirred as never before. Everybody is expressing his opinion now that Bliss' body has been found, and instead of mere [illegible] open charges of foul play are being freely made.

Homer Bliss confessed that he killed his father, Charles Bliss, but claims the shooting was accidental. He said that on the Sunday the old man left home he found him in the woods near the house in the act of trying to shoot himself. He grappled with the old man for the possession of the gun, and in the struggle both barrels were discharged and his father fell dead. He became scared and buried the body under a brush heap together with the gun. After the officers who came to the home to investigate the rumors of foul play had left the vicinity, Homer says he dug up the body and wheeled it to where it was found last Sunday. Then he fixed the gun to make it appear that his father had committed suicide.

Shocking Matricide.

A shocking case of matricide occurred Sunday night, when Mrs. Meggson, living one mile north of the Wayne county house, was assaulted by her son and injured to such an extent that she died Monday evening. Her slayer, whose name is Rolla Spears, has had insane spells for three years, and it was during one of these that he attacked the woman with a jackknife. After gashing her face in a brutal manner, he picked her with the knife until her body was a mass of cuts and bruises. She was not found until morning, when her almost lifeless body was removed to the hospital at Eloise, where she died Monday evening. Young Spears was found in the woods and returned to the asylum.

Wife Murder Charged.

The little settlement of Perrinsville, six miles from Wayne, is excited over the mysterious death of Mrs. George Cooper. It is alleged she fell down stairs, fracturing her skull. The first time her death became known was Sunday morning, when Mr. Cooper called in a neighbor named Sherwood and told him that his wife had fallen down cellar. They went together and carried her to a bed. A doctor was immediately called, although life was already extinct. A large share of the population refuse to believe in the accident theory, and hint strongly at foul play. It is said that the Coopers' domestic life was unhappy. One of the dead woman's brothers has stated that he does not believe she was accidentally killed.

Desperate Murder at Iron Mountain.

Jack Goldsworthy murdered Mrs. Mary Daniels at the Chapin mine location, near Iron Mountain, on the 21st, with a double-bladed ax, striking her on the head twice. He attacked her young son, who attempted to interfere. Goldsworthy, who attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat, was arrested. The woman died at 2 o'clock. The reason for the man's animus was that the dead woman had garnisheed his wages for the payment of a board bill. The first husband of Mrs. Daniels was killed in the Chapin mine, and her second husband met death in a saloon row. Goldsworthy is in jail and is well guarded by officers of the law.

Another Gasoline Explosion.

The careless use of gasoline is again responsible for a horrible accident in Detroit on the 20th. The victims were children, a girl aged 15 and a boy aged 6. The children were left alone in the house and the daughter thought she would like to experiment in cooking. She attempted to fill the gasoline tank while the fire was burning, and an explosion followed with the result that both she and her little brother were horribly burned, the latter dying of his injuries a few hours later. It is thought the girl will recover.

The citizens' Pingree memorial committee has asked County Treasurer Charles A. Buhrer, of Detroit, to accept the chairmanship of a committee to be organized for the purpose of communicating with all county officers throughout the state concerning the Hazen S. Pingree memorial fund.

The Lamented Pingree.

Sunday noon Hazen S. Pingree, Jr., sailed from Southampton for New York on the Red Star line steamer Zeeland, with the remains of the lamented ex-governor. That the funeral will be the largest ever given a public man in Michigan is evidenced by the preparations which continue to be made, and the indications are that the events attending will be the most notable of the kind that ever took place in the state. Everybody seems eager to serve in any capacity in the work of preparing for the funeral and for raising the fund for the proposed Pingree memorial, and it is likely that July 5 and 6, the days when the remains will lie in state and when the funeral will take place, will be regarded as general holidays. In many windows of stores and in private dwellings pictures of the late governor are beginning to appear, with mourning decoration.

Governor Bliss has issued this general order:

"It is recognized by the people of the commonwealth of Michigan that in the death of the late governor of the state, Hazen S. Pingree, Michigan lost a distinguished citizen, a fearless and tireless advocate of the rights of the people, a brave soldier of the civil war and commander in chief of the military forces of Michigan, and war governor during the Spanish-American war; therefore, to do honor to his memory, the military forces of the state will parade in compliance with the following orders:

"The staff of the commander in chief, the colonels of the Second and Third Infantries, the major commanding First Independent battalion and their adjutants will report to the adjutant general in Detroit at the Russell house on the morning of July 6, 1901.

Boynton will assume command of the military and naval forces of the state assigned to take part in the obsequies. Col. Charles W. Harrah, commanding the Lake Infantry, M. N. G., and Commander Hendrie, commanding Michigan naval brigade, will assemble their companies at Detroit, Mich., on the morning of July 6, 1901, and report to Brig. Gen. Boynton. "All companies of the Michigan National Guard, not assigned to duty by this order, will assemble and parade with proper insignia of mourning, at their home stations, July 6, 1901."

A raft containing 6,500,000 feet of choice white pine logs left Marquette Saturday for the Central Lumber Co., being the first installment of 14,000,000 feet of logs purchased in the spring of the Cleveland Saw Mill & Lumber Co. Another raft is being made up. The mills of Ross Bros., at Beaverton, are running day and night and will have all the timber that can be worked up this season. A raft containing 600,000 feet of long timber was made up at Black River, Lake Huron. It goes to Sarnia and is consigned to the Cleveland Saw Mill & Lumber Co. There is one more raft to make up and that will wind up long timber rafting at Black River.

Encampment Date Changed.

The state military board met at Lansing on the 20th, and out of regard to the wishes of Gov. Bliss changed the date of the state military encampment from August 3 to August 5. It had been the intention of the board to have the soldiers go into camp at Manistee on Saturday and break camp one week from the following Monday, but the governor was opposed to having two Sundays in camp, and it was therefore decided to have the camp begin on Monday. It will close August 14.

Third-class cars on steam roads, already common enough abroad, may be run in America if the ideas of S. T. Crapo, general manager of the Pere Marquette, are carried out. What has been known for years as the "Carter snake" has shown itself on the Carter farm by a lake of the same name near Hastings, when it discovered itself to a company of children, no one of whom was a professional snake liar. The judge stated his position was that he did not care to rush the respondent, but at the same time he was determined that there should be no unnecessary delay in the case, or in any of the indictment cases.

GREAT FLOODS IN VIRGINIA.

Loss of Life thought to Be Less than One Hundred.

DISTRICT THAT WAS COVERED.

An Eye Witness Describes the Scene at Keystone—The Destruction of Property Said to Be Worse than Reported—Secretary Hay's Son Dead.

The stream along which the Virginia floods have been reported to be most disastrous is the Elkhorn. This stream joins the Tug river, in which high water has prevailed, at the town of Welch. The Tug mining location, known as the village of Tug, is five miles below Welch, so that at that place the full effects of the flood in both streams must have been felt.

The flood district is in the southwestern corner of Virginia. It is the "Pocahontas coal field." The flood area is large, apparently embracing a district 40 miles long and 15 or 20 miles wide. The great loss evidently is to property. No such number of lives were lost as the frightened natives first reported. The original estimates of 200 fatalities must now be reduced by over half. It will be days before all the small back county settlements are heard from and the exact facts known.

[illegible] information as to the storm at Pocahontas coal field places the damage to property at $500,000. Loss of life about 50. No loss of passengers or trains. An eye witness of the flood which wrecked Keystone was a guest of the National Hotel, one of the few buildings that escaped destruction. As the town was built along one narrow street that followed the stream, [illegible] the houses stood on piles or walls over the Elkhorn and on the other against the mountains.

At Shawnee several persons are said to have been drowned. The greater part of the town was destroyed.

A messenger who traveled the whole length of the flood district reports that the destruction to property is worse than apprehended, but that loss of life will not be so great. Estimates here are still 200 deaths or less.

Fifty bodies have been found, it is claimed. The list of missing and reported dead is 249. Thousands of people are homeless.

Information from the Tug river district is to the effect that the damage to the coal operations in that region is not great, but that the lumber interests have suffered considerably. Over a hundred miles of track belonging to the various coal operations are practically a total loss.

The damage begins at Coaldale, but Keystone and Bucke are the greatest sufferers. The two towns are practically one and form the largest place in the coal fields. Many a resident miners were in Keystone on Saturday morning and numbers of them whose names will never be learned perished.

Heavy Storm.

Pittsburg and vicinity were visited Saturday by one of the heaviest storms known since the United States weather bureau has been established. Great damage was done and three deaths resulted in Pittsburg.
