ONE THING WE DO KNOW and that is no one captures any flies off us in the way of prices. We are nothing if not hen-ergetic, and we always do eggactly as we advertise. We have put in a new and chic lot of hat and bonnet shapes to-day; also more new ribbons, splashers, satins, etc. By one grand coup we have taken the lead in our special line of business and we intend to keep it. Ladies, come and see our stock of woolen half hose before you buy for your husbands, brothers, fathers and sons. You will save enough on a few pairs to buy yourself a toboggan cap. We are selling new and choice goods at prices not off-dan equalled. Allyn & Co.

Bismarck and the Ladies.

Prince Bismarck is less fortunate than Mr. Chamberlain, who finds that the Birmingham holiday-makers never do any harm to his walks and orchid-houses. The Chancellor has been obliged to close the fine park of Friedrichsruhe to the public. The devastation daily wrought in it by the imbecile tribe of relic-hunters has rendered this measure an absolute necessity. This year the pillage has been particularly shameless. The flowers all disappeared long since, and the trees, or at least every bit of green on them, bade fair to follow in their wake. Not many days ago the Chancellor came upon a party of ladies hard at work stripping a fine elm of its branches. "Ladies," said the Prince, taking off his hat, not only out of politeness, but to give point to his observation, "if every one who comes in here were to follow your example, my trees would soon be as bare of foliage as my head is of hair."—St. James's Gazette.
