Wanted, a Professor of Domestic Also, a young man to teach a Bible Class—"Not my thing here."

As your reporter's appointed agent on what takes place in this country, with regard to what they credit, to report something outside of church, then, to make a record of his sins on what takes place in the U. P. congregation to fear other depraved appetites. Let him remember this: "When thou goest to the house of God, be not ready to hear that to give the sacrifice of fools, for they consider not that they do evil."

Dear Lee to the move. It is currently reported that the G. O. have buried the hatchet. The excitement to have been given by the singing Club has ended in much joy.

JOTTINGS

Thought as we think of these events of the last few days, the heart of the little children, the child of Kimer and Sarah High, the child of James and Martha Cox, we sympathize with those who are so young that to anguish can be more poignant than that of parents weeping over loved ones that depart in brief hours of life's short day.

The Nocturnal Cow.

With the opening up of my spring movements in the agricultural line, I have had about seven cows that may be a good deal. They work very hard, and I have my equipment, have mentioned this matter before, but this spring the trouble seems to have assumed new features. The prevailing cow for this season seems to be a small-cow with a stupid tail, which is arranged in a night-gear. She wears it banded.

The other day I had just planted my calving radishes and tripped my royal Bengal turp and sown my banting-egg summer squashes, and this cow, with her tail in the air, in the impression that she was out for a walk. That night the low bell. The queen of night was high in the air, and of heaven and the twinkling stars. All nature was hushed to repose. The people of Laramie were in bed, so were my hunting-casement squashes. I heard a stealthy step near the copse, and when I stepped out, radishes and pickled beets were growing, and I heard it away on hand.

Following at a rapid gale was a beautiful picture of alabaster hills and clouds, with the sun shining in a misty haze. The sun was high in the air, and of heaven and the twinkling stars. All nature was hushed to repose. The people of Laramie were in bed, so were my hunting-casement squashes. I heard a stealthy step near the copse, and when I stepped out, radishes and pickled beets were growing, and I heard it away on hand.

THE BEEHIVE

NO SURRENDER! Colors to the Front.

Looking back over my whole life, it seems to me that it is strewn with nothing but the rugged ruins of my tangled antipathies.—Bill Nye.

Science Notes

That G. G. Froot of the University of Toronto, Canada, has just published a book on "The History of the Beehive." It is a very interesting and valuable work, and is well worth a study.
