STATE NEWS

BESSEMER'S HEIR TO THE THRONE OF NORWAY MAY ACCEPT.

SAGINAW SUICIDE'S APPEAL.

Among the Hills With Stolen Money and Jewels—She Was a Michigan Girl—Vincent Pays Up.

May Be a King.

Bessemer may furnish a ruler for the now vacant throne of Norway. Invitations have been received by ex-Representative Louis Munthe, from what is termed the legitimist wing in the Norwegian storthing, to visit Christiania and establish his claim as direct descendant of Haakan V., the last independent king, who died in 1319. Mr. Munthe has been a resident of Bessemer for more than a decade. He represented the Gogebic district in the state legislature in 1891, being the only Democrat ever elected to the legislature from this district.

The legitimist party in the storthing insists that the Norwegian throne shall be filled by a lineal descendant of the native royal line. It is opposed to giving the crown to any other. It was because of this that the invitation was sent to Mr. Munthe, who declares that he can trace his descent from Agnes Haakanidotter, daughter of Haakan V.

Mr. Munthe is now an old man, and even the possible achievement of a crown were he to return to Norway is scarcely attractive enough to persuade him to make the trip to his native land. Should further importunity be made upon him, however, it is possible that he might accede to a pressing invitation.

To Young Men.

With bed clothes wrapped lightly about him just as he had pulled them in last convulsions, George O. Feige, of Saginaw, was found in a room at the Grand Union hotel, where he had committed suicide 24 hours before. Chloroform and strychnine found on the dresser left no doubt of the means employed. On a stand near the bed was a note giving his name and asking that Henry Feige, Jr., of Saginaw, be notified. A letter written in a clear, firm hand and addressed "To Young Men," gave an inkling of the man's history. In it he says:

"I began to go in fast company.

"My drinking and gambling habits became fixed.

"I lost the only good job I ever had.

"I braced up for a time, but fell back again.

"I got worse and worse till it has come to this.

"For God's sake, young men, stay away from liquor, gambling and women."

Fled With Money and Jewels.

Somewhere along the range of hills lining Lake Michigan north of Muskegon, Owen Comm, alias Louis Clarke, and his wife and child are hiding from the law, hiding, having in their possession $15,000 of precious jewels and money stolen from along State street, Chicago, during the past three months by a gang of professional thieves. Comm and party left Chicago last Thursday, but sent a trunk on ahead of them. The trunk contained over $7,000 in money and the rest of the swag was on their persons. Their trunk was carted away from the Goodrich dock at Muskegon by an old farmer. Chicago detectives are aiding the Muskegon officers.

Lived in Marquette.

Mabel Beland, the young woman who is featured in the sensational $50,000 damage suit for alleged breach of promise against John O'Neil, a wealthy Chicagoan, for whom she was housekeeper, is the daughter of Mrs. Stack, of Marquette. It is some eight or nine years since she resided there. She was reported to have married the widower of her sister, a man named Kelcher. The loss of her breach of promise suit is a big surprise in Marquette on that account. Her mother's second husband is a locomotive engineer.

Vicious Convict.

An ugly convict, in Jackson prison, Wm. Hennessey, found a rusty old shoe knife and with it he slashed Convict John Kreiting as he was passing Hennessey's cell at locking up time. The wound is across the breast in a jagged line and though not very deep it is feared blood poisoning may result because of the condition of the knife. There was no cause for the assault.

Hennessey was sent up from Monroe a few months ago for 15 years. Kreiting was sent from Muskegon in 1900 for six and a half years for attempted murder and would soon have been released.

Hennessey has been placed in a dungeon, awaiting the result of Kreiting's wounds before a determination of his punishment. Kreiting is no worse, but is closely watched by the prison physician.

ODESSA'S BLOODY HORROR IS APPALLING IN RESULTS.

NUMBER KILLED IS NOT KNOWN.

The Fury of the Mob Only Ceased From Absolute Exhaustion—There Were Nearly 6,000 Maimed and Wounded.

Unequalled Mob Ferocity.

Owing to the mobs being satiated with two days' carnival of murder and destruction by flame, the revolt against law and order in Odessa began dying down on Saturday, partially, perhaps, because of lack of material upon which to prey. Almost the entire Jewish quarters of Moldavanka, Slobodka and Bugalovka are devastated and their inhabitants have either been killed or wounded or have sought refuge in other sections of the town. It is impossible to ascertain the number of persons killed. The Saturday morning 5,657 wounded persons were reported to have been taken to the hospitals. The whole fury of the mobs was directed unchecked against the Jews. During the first demonstration over the emperor's manifesto and the sudden acquisition of "freedom" tens of thousands of men who had hated the Jews through generations became drunk with the desire for Jewish blood, swarmed into the Jewish sections of the town and killed for the very joy of killing.

In recent instances the military aided instead of prevented the work of vengeance and fury which culminated Saturday in the quarters mentioned. Every Jew, man, woman or child, who was caught was slaughtered. The methods employed in the work of butchery were too revolting for description. Before the morning's dawn the material had become exhausted and the men who had for the moment become beasts, left the wrecked sections of the city, and though sullen, were easily driven back before the rifles of the infantry.

A grip of investigation over the Jewish quarters confirmed the stories of horrors and devastation. Some bodies mutilated, of women and children were still unremoved from the deserted streets. The shops were closed and in the wrecked houses broken furniture was lying everywhere in heaps.

At the beginning of the massacres, the students militia rendered some assistance and saved many lives, but the police, it is said, disarmed the students and even in some cases shot them with their own revolvers.

Witte's Problem.

Count Witte is getting his hands on the helm and the Russian ship of state is beginning to right itself. Gradually the disorder that followed the promulgation of the constitution giving the people liberty is being put down.

The premier has met the immense difficulties confronting him and the pressure of the demands of the different classes of society with the energy and sincerity that are more and more giving to him the support of the moderate liberals, who have been frightened by the carnival of disorder into which the country has been plunged and the inordinate demands of the proletariat under the leadership of the "reds" and social revolutionists.

Freedom of the press and general amnesty, except for crime, have followed each other, but Count Witte has steadily refused to yield to the demand for the organization of a national guard on the ground that it would be equivalent to arming the social democrats to fight and destroy the whole government between midnight and morning.

A Sleeping Swimmer.

Deserting his bed for two hours or more, at least twice a week, and then denying that he had been absent at all, caused Mrs. Gabriel Jackson of English, Ind., to become suspicious of her husband and led her to have her brothers "keep an eye upon him." Last night Gabriel slipped out as usual and was followed watchfully by his brothers-in-law while he traveled more than a mile to the old "swimming hole" upon his father's farm, where he divested himself of his clothing and swam to and fro across the pond three several times. When he emerged he carefully redressed and then returned home and to bed. In the morning he knew nothing of the occurrence till told of it, and could not believe it till brought to the scene and shown the footprints in the sand. The queer part of it is that Jackson was not known to be a somnambulist, though he had been thus afflicted in childhood.

Good health is an assurance of perpetual youth and beauty.

"Please do not say that the family deeply mourn for their dead. For years he has been husband and father only in name. For affection" given, only blows and curses have been received in return. It is better for him that he is dead and better for us. Now that the long, dark chapter is ended, do not make us hypocrites by publishing that which is not true." So declared the wife and family of the late William Clarke, of Muscatine, Ia., when reporters called to get his obituary. He died of delirium tremens.

The Rhode Island established a new speed record for battleships of her class, on her official standardization trial trip over the mile course off Owl's head, coast of Maine. She steamed one mile at a rate of 19.23 knots an hour. Another mile was discovered what had done the collapsed and was taken in a dying condition to a hospital.

KILLED AND MAIMED.

Escaping gas ignited by a candle carried by two men who entered the basement to investigate the cause of the leak shattered the solid brick building occupied by the Miners' National bank, in Ishpeming, crushed out four lives and injured a dozen others more or less seriously, shortly after 9 o'clock Sunday morning. Strange to say, the men who carried the light that caused the explosion were uninjured, although they were blown through a rear window and into a box car standing near.

The dead are: Edward McGraw, aged 12; Stephen Goodman, aged 12, son of B. J. Goodman, logging contractor; Alice McGee, aged 19, daughter of James McGee, master mechanic on the D., S., S. & A., and Edward Kiser, aged 11.

The most seriously injured are: Jas. F. Mullins, manager of the Miners' National bank, whose injuries may prove fatal. He and Hans Gunderson, a real estate man, were in the building when the explosion occurred. Gunderson was blown out of the building up in the air and upon the roof of a higher building near by, his life being saved, as the fall would have killed him.

Fred Anderson and Erick Peterson were blown through the end of the building and badly injured. Thomas Flannigan, a retired merchant, had one limb fractured, as also did Miss Berdie Ruez. Others who were more or less cut and bruised are: Mrs. Butler, Mrs. P. F. Small, Loretta McGee, Katherine Bright, Mrs. J. M. Keith, Mrs. Geo. Smeltz and Charles Dudon.

"Dead stuff," replied Col. Waterson. "Roosevelt would not touch a second term with a 40-foot pole. I won't say why, and I won't give my reasons for thinking that he will become president of Harvard college, but see if I am not right."

Commenting on the continuous ovation President Roosevelt received during his recent trip through the south, the oracle of the Louisville Courier Journal started to give out an extended interview, beginning:

"Mr. President Roosevelt comes south claiming kindred; the south are a most impressionable people. Now go away; do you want me to say things I wouldn't say in my own paper? I want to go to sleep."

Curtis Tariff Bill.

Philippine tariff legislation will be one of the first of several important pieces of unfinished business brought to the attention of congress when it convenes in December. Advocates of free trade between this country and the archipelago are determined to see to it that the excuse of lack of time made last winter shall not avail at the coming session. The bill of Representative Curtis provides for a duty on sugar and tobacco at 25 per cent of the Dingley rates and all other imports free will be introduced again at once. Representative Curtis has prepared a bill providing that all imports from the islands, including sugar and tobacco, shall come in free of duty, but not to take effect until 1909, when the provision of the treaty with Spain relating to her trade with the Philippines shall have ceased to be operative.

Good Progress.

Secretary Taft says he is very much pleased with the situation in Panama, which he said, he found, had greatly changed for the better since his last visit. He said he was sorry that he had already seen that the work on the canal was progressing satisfactorily and that the work was now efficiently organized and he was happy to note the spirit of it men on the canal had improved and that the depression of five or six months ago did not exist. All of them seemed to enjoy life there and were interested in their work.

The secretary said he had found the sanitary conditions excellent and believed that by continuing the present methods yellow fever could be controlled, or at least its ravages considerably diminished.

"On the Rocks."

A dozen or more insurance financiers were assembled in a room just prior to the exposure of the affairs of the Equitable Life, its president, Mr. Alexander, stood before them and pleaded for a change of method, announcing the course he proposed to take in case of their refusal. He could endure existing conditions no longer. They said, "It will ruin you." He replied, "I know it."

"There is a saying of the ancients, 'Let the man who has the fewest years to live be the sacrifice.' I am the oldest man present. "You with your millions may weather the storm. I shall go upon the rocks, but conscience will be clear."

This was said in a sermon by Rev. Dr. H. A. Stimson, of the Manhattan Congregational church, and is the first hint given the public that James W. Alexander is irretrievably broken in body. He is all but hopelessly broken in mind. He is broken in spirit. His family name, which he revered above all things, and which since long before the revolutionary war was synonymous for honesty, integrity, fair dealing and uprightness, has been assailed and tarnished.

ROOSEVELT WILL HAVE A GREAT CAREER SAYS WATTERSON.

THE TARIFF FOR PHILIPPINES.

Conditions in Panama Please Mr. Taft—Alexander, of Insurance Fame, is Now "On the Rocks."

The President's Career.

A glorious career for President Roosevelt as president of Harvard university after he leaves the White House is predicted by Henry Watterson. He said: "President Roosevelt will round out his career after leaving the White House as president of Harvard university. It will be a fitting and glorious termination of his useful life. He will be the greatest figure in the country as the head of the university."

It was suggested that Mr. Roosevelt might be renominated, despite his decision not to accept a second term; that in some circles it had been predicted that the Democratic party would choose him as their standard bearer.

"Stuff," replied Col. Watterson. "Roosevelt would not touch a second term with a 40-foot pole. I won't say why, and I won't give my reasons for thinking that he will become president of Harvard college, but see if I am not right."

PURSUED BY WOLVES.

Surrounded and savagely attacked for three nights by a howling pack of two score wolves, emboldened by hunger, in a dense forest in Iron county, Steve Loaney and Robert Sullivan, timber-lookers, at last eluded their fierce assailants, and have returned to civilization from one of the most thrilling experiences reported by hunters or lumbermen in the history of the upper peninsula.

Loaney and Sullivan, in cruising for timber, pushed their way far into the unbroken wilderness in Iron county. They suspected no danger from wild animals, and consequently were prepared with only their hatchets for the desperate attack made upon them Wednesday night. An occasional wolf had been sighted, but a horde of the fierce animals not anticipated.

Lying by their camp fire, the timber cruisers were startled by the howls of the approaching pack. Nearer and nearer they came. Their only refuge in the only course open to them—building an immense fire to keep the animals at bay. They succeeded, although the wolves were maddened by making the situation more than desperate, until the animals drew off on the break of day. This trying experience was repeated Thursday and Friday nights.
