A HEALTHY OLD AGE

OFTEN THE BEST PART OF LIFE

Help for Women Passing Through Change of Life

Providence has allotted us each at least seventy years in which to fulfill our mission in life, and it is generally our own fault if we die prematurely.

Mrs. Mary Koehne

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth.

When everything becomes a burden and you cannot wake in the morning without excessive fatigue, and you break out into perspiration easily, and your face flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation, and you cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 Garfield Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years in my family and it never disappoints; so when I felt that I was nearing the change of life I commenced to treatment with it. I took in all about six bottles and it did me a great deal of good. It stopped my dizzy spells, pains in my back and the headaches with which I had suffered for months before taking the Compound. I feel that if it had not been for this great medicine for women that I should not have been alive today. It is splendid for women, old or young, and will surely cure all female disorders."

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write her for advice. Her great experience is at their service, free of cost.

HOW TO TELL A BOILED EGG.

Betting Man Made Money on It, but of Course No One Else Will.

The betting man said to the waiter:

"Boil one egg. Cool it and put it among half a dozen raw ones. Then bring all the eggs together in to me on a plate."

The eggs, in ten or fifteen minutes, came in. They were examined carefully by everyone in the room.

"I will bet ten dollars," said the betting man, "that no one here can pick out the one cooked from the six raw eggs."

This bet was taken.

Thereupon the man spun the eggs topline, on the table, one by one. All spun poorly, with a wabbling motion, save a dark egg, which spun as steadily and truly as a top.

"This dark egg is the cooked one," said the betting man. He opened it, and so it proved. "A boiled egg," he explained, "spins beautifully. An uncooked, liquid one spins in a poor, unsteady way. The difference is plain, and anyone can tell it."

Once in a While.

"Yes," said little Arthur, "since pa struck it rich and ma and the girls have gone into society we have a Frenchman to do our cookin', so we eat in French and sing in Italian and think mostly in German, but once in a while when things don't go right and pa gets mad we still get the good old English right off the bat."

CUTICURA GROWS HAIR.

Scalp Cleared of Dandruff and Hair Restored by One Box of Cuticura and One Cake of Cuticura Soap.

A. W. Taft of Independence, Va., writing under date of Sept. 15, 1904, says: "I have had falling hair and dandruff for twelve years and could get nothing to help me. Finally I bought one box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and they cleared my scalp of the dandruff and stopped the hair falling. Now my hair is growing as well as ever. I am highly pleased with Cuticura Soap as a toilet soap. (Signed) A. W. Taft, Independence, Va."

Billion Dollar Grass.

When the John A. Salzer Seed Co., of La Crosse, Wis., introduced this remarkable grass three years ago, little did they dream it would be the most talked of grass in America, the biggest, quick, hay producer on earth, but this has come to pass.

BILLION $ GRASS

Agricultural Editors wrote about it, Agr. College Professors lectured about it, Agr. Institute Orators talked about it, while in the farm home by the quiet fireside, in the corner grocery, in the village post-office, at the creamery, at the depot, in fact wherever farmers gathered, Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass, that marvelous grass, good for 5 to 14 tons hay per acre and lots of pasture besides, is always a theme worthy of the farmer's voice.

Then comes Bromus Inermis, then which there is no better grass or better permanent hay producer on earth. Grows wherever sod is found. Then the farmer talks about Salzer's Teosinte, which produces 100 stocks from one kernel of seed, 11 ft high, in 100 days, rich in nutrition and greedily eaten by cattle, hogs, etc., and is good for 80 tons of green food per acre.

Victoria Rape, the luxuriant food for hogs and sheep, which can be grown at 25c a ton, and Spelts at 20c a bu., both great food for sheep, hogs and cattle, also come in for their share in the discussion.

LONDON'S MANY CABS

SMART VEHICLES FILL STREETS OF GREAT CITY.

One of the Best Methods of Seeing the "Sights" of England's Metropolis—How the Trade Is Organized and Conducted.

(Special Correspondence.)

There are 26,000 cabs in London, and nearly all of them belong to one man, and a nobleman at that, for the premier earl of England, he of Shewsbury and Talbot, has a vast income from the cab business of the largest city in the world. The earl gives his pet hobby as the "cab trade," and he is so fond of cabs that he frequently drives them, and, although he is a man of vast wealth, he seeks his fares as eagerly along the Strand and Piccadilly as any coster cabby that ever cracked a whip.

It is impossible for any one who has visited London to think of that city without a background of hansom cabs looming up through the fog and smoke that still cling to the memory, for cabs are as much a part of the gloomy old city as Westminster abbey or the Parliament houses.

Next to bowling along on the top of a 'bus, there is nothing that the London streets has to offer quite so delightful as a ride in an easy-riding hansom. The smooth motion, the sense of freedom that the wide view before one affords, and the spice of danger ever present as the daring Jehu of the cab grazes hubs and horses with splendid skill, go to make up the keen enjoyment of a cab drive over the asphalt pavement.

Hansom Up-to-Date.

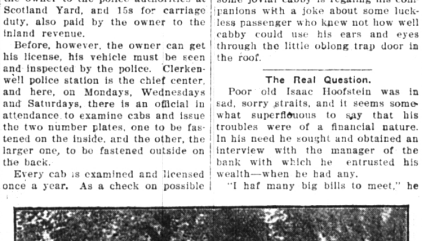
Control of the Industry.

The cab industry is in the hands of a large number of men, about 4,000, many of whom own three or four cabs which they let out, and are known by the title of "Mushers."

Before a cab is allowed to go on the street three payments have to be made—5s for a driver's license, £2 for hackney carriage license, paid by the owner to the police authorities at Scotland Yard, and 15s for carriage duty, also paid by the owner to the inland revenue.

Before, however, the owner can get his license, his vehicle must be seen and inspected by the police. Clerkenwell police station is the chief center, and here, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, there is an official in attendance to examine cabs and issue the two number plates, one to be fastened on the inside, and the other, the larger one, to be fastened outside on the back.

Every cab is examined and licensed once a year. As a check on possible negligence, the back plate has a device on it, as well as a number. This year it is the royal arms, next year it will be a crown, and the year after that the royal arms again; so that a police officer may tell at a glance how matters stand with a cab under suspicion.



London Four-Wheeler.

The ordeal of examining a cab is not severe. The official glances over it, and produces a pot of yellow ochre, a shaving brush and a stencil plate, and on the body of the cab at the back he marks the device of royal arms or crown and underneath the word "Approved" and the initials of the chief commissioner—"E. R. C. B." Once the stencil mark is stamped, and the number of plates fixed the cab can begin business.

When a driver first goes to Scotland Yard for his license he is put through a sort of informal examination on his knowledge of the great railway termini and the public buildings, but no sort of test of his driving capabilities is made; those are always assumed as a foregone conclusion, and he is given a license and badge on payment of five shillings.

Then he makes his way to a cab yard, leaves his license with the proprietor, and is given a cab and a horse, with a change horse, for all of which he pays seventeen shillings a day. His whip, mackintosh cape, knee apron and oil flask are at his own expense.

Some drivers own their own hansoms, which are generally of the rickety variety, and should be avoided.

If a cabby drives a smart hansom he haunts clubland, and a day may bring him in a rich harvest, thirty shillings, perhaps, and only working eight hours. Some men work sixteen hours a day, but old hands never more than twelve hours if they can help it.

How the Cabbies Differ.

It takes cabbies some years, sharp as they are, to learn the way of London society, and to elude that ever vigilant person, the young "bobby"; for, before he knows it, cabby may find himself at Marlborough station charged with loitering. It may be his first offense, and he is let off with two shillings and sixpence fine, with two extra shillings for costs.

The cabby of the old school, whom one sees but very rarely, nowadays, wears the triple coachman's cape and a very rusty, out of date tile; his temper is not of the best; having been harassed by the police and suspected by the public for years, he has grown to look upon himself in the light of a licensed buccaneer, to whom every passenger is lawful prey.

The young and modern cabby is different, however. He feels friendly with the general public, and wears a stylish overcoat and a shining top hat that does much to attract fares. Sometimes he is handsome and distinguished looking, in which case one is apt to suspect him of being a crushed peer of the realm, some wayward "second son," or some gentleman of fallen fortunes, who has taken to cab driving as a last resort for an honest living. Indeed, such cases are not rare, and why should not one speculate about one's cabby if he be fair to look upon?

Societies for the Cabmen.

There are in London several societies for the benefit of cabmen, the two most important being the Cab Drivers' Benevolent Association and the Southwestern Friendly Society. The former society grants annuities to aged drivers, gives legal assistance and grants loans without interest to members. The Southwestern Friendly Society on the other hand, is self-supporting, it has over 700 members and is in all respects exactly what a friendly society should be.

Cheery and happy-go-lucky in the dreariest weather, cabby never forgets the approaching rainy day, and is always prepared to help a friend in need, answering the calls upon his pocketbook manfully and paying his share without a murmur.

Then there is another body called the Shelter Friend society, the object of which is to look after the little buildings called "cabmen's shelters," that one sees hugged up against the curbstone at intervals all through the streets of London. In these shelters there is a wholesome lunch provided with hot coffee or tea for a small sum, and here are toilet conveniences and a stove where cabby may warm his fingers and toes in severe weather.

The attendants of these shelters are usually retired cabbies. They pay a small rent and run the shelters for the general society. These places are very cozy and inviting and on pleasant summer afternoons one may hear shouts of laughter from the open windows, and then one may know that some jovial cabby is regaling his companions with a joke about some luckless passenger who knew not how well cabby could use his ears and eyes through the little oblong trap door in the roof.

The Real Question.

Poor old Isaac Hoofstein was in sad, sorry straits, and it seems somewhat superfluous to say that his troubles were of a financial nature. In his need he sought and obtained an interview with the manager of the bank with which he entrusted his wealth—when he had any.

"I haf many big bills to meet," he wailed, "and no money to do it with. Can I haf an overdraft on der bank?"

"Well, I dare say it can be arranged," said the manager. "But how much do you require?"

"Dot is not the question," said the wily Hoofstein, seeing in this complacent attitude a loophole out of his trouble. "The question is—How much haf you got?"—London Answers.

Statesmen's Lapse of Memory.

There is hardly ever a day of eulogies in Congress but that some orator makes a slip, during the flow of eloquence, in the name of the deceased statesman he is extolling. When the Senate was holding a memorial exercise for the late George Frisbie Hoar something like that happened. A Senator proceeded to speak in exalted terms of "our highly esteemed colleague, George Francis Hoar, lately gone from our midst." His error in confusing the middle name of the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts with that of the eccentric roamer, philosopher and financier, George Francis Train, was, however, pardonable. Mr. Hoar, great orator and scholar that he was, once committed a similar error in referring to Mr. Blaine in the course of a speech as "James F. Blaine."

Striking an Average.

"Their pay is shockingly small for some of our public officials," said the broad-minded man.

"Yes," answered the cynic, "but it averages up. Some of the public officials are shockingly small for their pay."

Birds' Preference in Colors.

Red will annoy a turkey cock as much as a bull, but a sparrow will not let it disturb its mind. But if one flirts a blue rag in front of a caged sparrow's eyes he will go frantic with disgust. Sparrows and linnets, too, will refuse food offered them on a piece of blue paper and dislike the appearance of any one wearing a blue dress. Medium light blue affects them most and blue serge they scarcely mind at all. Thrushes and blackbirds object to yellow, but will use red or blue dried grasses left about their haunts to build the outlayers of their nests. Yellow grasses they will not use.

School Children's Dyspepsia.

The common form of dyspepsia, or indigestion, which stops the growth, pales the cheeks, weakens the system of so many school children, is often due to improper or too quickly eaten lunches. While seeing to a correction of the cause, it is also important to cure the disordered conditions of stomach and bowels. This can be done by no medicine so safely and surely as Dr. Caldwell's (laxative) Syrup Pepsin. Try it. Sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00. Money back if it fails.

First Knowledge of Galvanism.

Galvani, a natural philosopher of Italy, was dissecting a dead frog one day while a pupil was making experiment in electricity by his side. He observed that the muscles of the frog, being exposed, gave signs of motion whenever the nerves came in contact with the scalpel. Galvani discovered the existence of a new principle in this phenomenon, and originated the fertile branch of physics known by the name of galvanism.

Finnish Bridal Gowns.

In rural Finland a bride wears to church a curious combination of wedding veil and wedding bonnet. It is a great cap with ribbon streamers behind and in front a fall of lace which shadows the face. Over her dark cashmere dress she ties a handsomely embroidered white apron.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

Are Never Without Pe-ru-na in the Home For Catarrhal Diseases.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Atkinson, Independence, Mo.

Remarkable Cures Effected By Pe-ru-na.

Under date of January 10, 1897, P. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife has been a sufferer from a complication of diseases for the past twenty-five years. Her case has baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing. She was also passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life.

"In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which we at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of twenty-five years standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me."—John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna,

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. I am still cured of catarrh."—John O. Atkinson, Independence, Mo., Box 172.

Mrs. Alla Schwandt, Sanborn, Minn., writes:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and catarrh for twenty-five years. Could not sleep day or night. After having used Peruna I can sleep and nothing bothers me now. If I ever am afflicted with any kind of sickness, Peruna will be the medicine I shall use. My son was cured of catarrh of the larynx by Peruna."—Mrs. Alla Schwandt.

When old age comes, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.
