NOTES FROM MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Always take you wife into your confidence and let her help you work out the hard problems.

Care must always be taken in feeding new oats after old dry oats. The change should be gradual.

The last call to clean out all the stock which will not pay their way through the winter season.

Feed all stock so that there will be a gain. It is a losing business to feed so as to just keep them even.

Ask the wife's advice and follow it after it is given. You cannot go far wrong when you trust her judgment.

Keep the skim milk on the farm. You cannot afford to let it go. Get a separator, sell the cream and feed the milk to the pigs and calves.

A windbreak for the orchard would prove a good thing and evergreens are about the best for this purpose. Plan to set some out in the spring.

Plan to improve the long winter evenings by some course of study or reading and in planning out the work for next season. Try each year to have new ideas worked out.

One method of feeding molasses to horses or other stock is to mix it with water and dampen the hay, which has been cut into short lengths. Then to this the ground feed may be added.

Fall plowing of the ground is good both because it exposes many insects to the killing frosts of winter, and also because it puts the ground into condition for early planting in the spring.

If you have kept a record of your field operations and made note of soil and crop conditions during the growing season you will have valuable memoranda for comparison with the actual results obtained and will thus be able intelligently to determine what are the best methods for you to follow in your farm operations.

Plan work for the rainy days. A good job for the days when the weather shuts you in is that of going over the harness, oiling and repairing it. A majority of farmers are very slack in the way in which they care for the harness. Cleaning and oiling and repairing weak places will make harness last twice as long as it will under conditions of neglect.

The department of agriculture has estimated that the crop values will mount up to eight billions of dollars—five hundred millions more than last year. Who dares to say that this has been a poor year? It has been a trying one in some respects and some sections have suffered, but taken as a whole the farmers have done better than ever before. Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

To have good silage one must have a good silo. If you are going to build one and want to get the best information regarding the best types of silos, send to the Iowa Agricultural college for its recent bulletin on silo construction. This bulletin gives in condensed form the advantages and disadvantages of all the various types of silos, together with practical hints on their construction. Profuse illustrations aid in making the meaning clear. It is a pamphlet that will be invaluable to any farmer or dairyman who is contemplating the erection of a silo.

Farmers who are in any way engaged in fruit raising will be interested in the program planned by the Illinois State Horticultural society for its annual convention at Champaign. It proposes to give a course of lectures and laboratory work along practical horticultural lines in addition to the usually interesting program which includes instruction in the propagation of plants by seeds, cutting and grafting, the grading and packing of fruits and the selection and judging of exhibition fruits. Three whole days will be devoted to the subject of spraying, in its various phases. Three sessions will be given to the study and demonstration of pruning fruit trees. One attention will be given to landscape gardening, floriculture and vegetable gardening.

All the uncultivated, unproductive lands are not to be found in the great arid west, nor in the swamp lands of some of our southeastern states. They are to be found in small patches on innumerable farms throughout the country. And why so? Because our farmers are thoughtless and careless and do not by the best methods get the best out of their soil. By special treatment there is scarcely a square foot of ground on any farm which cannot be made to pay a profit. How much of your farm is practically worthless? Study it up. Don't let it lie idle any longer. If it needs draining, tile it. If it needs building up, put stock on it and fertilize it. Find out what is the matter with it and then apply the remedy. Your state agricultural college stands ready to help you. Get the advice of the experts to be found there. Not one quarter of our farmers are availing themselves of the helping hand which our state agricultural experts are only too glad to extend to every one who asketh.

Mongrel stock never brought success to a poultry raiser.

Ground troubled with white grubs should be fall plowed.

Corn and oats ground together make a fine ration for the stock.

It's the slovenly farmer who allows the chickens to roost in the barn.

Cleanliness is an essential factor in successful sheep farming. Provide clean drinking water, and clean yards.

Wheat can't be beat as a poultry feed, but corn should be fed with it to supply the starchy food needed.

Go through the orchard and destroy all cocoons and egg clusters on trunks, branches, etc. Clean up the ground, too, and burn the litter.

Clean milk cannot be produced from cows kept in filthy surroundings. There is nothing which is so easily contaminated as milk.

Corn is not objectionable as a ration for the brood sow if too much is not fed and if oats or other grain rich in protein is provided.

Twenty parts common lime, five parts salt and 15 parts of water when mixed well and then bottled make good fire extinguishing grenades.

Let us raise more sheep and supply the constantly increasing demand for wool. Altogether too much wool has to be imported. The farms would be better and the farmers richer if they raised more sheep.

Put the farm tools and machines up for the winter, but before doing so be sure they are cleaned and oiled. The time spent now will not only prolong the life of the tools but will save you valuable time in the spring.

Care for the cows right now and they will keep up the milk flow all winter. It is in the fall when the change from summer to winter conditions is made that most cows suffer. Let the change be as gradual as possible.

You are burning up good money when you burn up the leaves. Save them for bedding or rake in a pile and cover over with branches to prevent blowing away. It will make fine compost for the garden and for potting plants.

Scatter wood ashes around the poultry yard. They will purify the ground and the chickens will pick up the small bits of charcoal. This is good for them. And this reminds us to urge you not to forget to provide suitable grits for them.

To mark your tools effectively do it with nitric acid. Place beeswax or tallow on place where metal is to be taken out and scratch the letters through the wax. Pour the acid in the groove thus formed and after a few minutes clean off and you will find your name in the steel to stay.

The Texas experiment station has by test shown that in feeding a ton of cotton seed meal having a fertilizer valuation of $29.50 to fattening animals, that portion of its fertility which passes into the solid excrement has a valuation of about $12.40, and that which passes into the urine of about $15. Here is proof of the importance of saving the liquid manure.

One of the indications that there is a growing interest in agriculture is the increasing space which the magazines of the country are giving to subjects of this kind. Not a month goes by now but that one or more of the big magazines have articles on agricultural tonics. "The Awakening of the Farmer, in October Atlantic, should be specially helpful and suggestive to the farmer.

More gasoline engines are finding their way on to the farm every year. A good indication of the improvement in this direction is found in the increasing exhibits each year of gasoline engines at the state and county fairs and the interest shown by farmers in these exhibits. Even on the small farm where the call for power is small, the use of the gasoline engine is proving itself of economic value.

It would be interesting, nay, rather appalling, if accurate figures were obtainable as to the losses sustained by farmers every year through neglect of farm machinery. How much of the machinery of your farm has been properly housed and cared for for the winter? Remember it is not enough to push the machine into the shed after bringing it from the field. It should be cleaned and oiled thoroughly so that rust cannot get in its destructive work.

Why not a course of study in salesmanship in our agricultural colleges? If there is one point in which the average farmer is weak it is knowing how to dispose of his produce to the best advantage. Such a course could be arranged to teach the farmer what he should know about the distribution of the farm products of the world. He will then learn to dispose of his goods scientifically, just as to-day the advanced farmer raises his scientifically.

Lime sulphur wash for spraying for San Jose scale is made as follows: To make 150 gallons of the mixture, take 65 pounds of best stone lime and 50 pounds of sulphur. Make a paste of the sulphur and have from 15 to 20 gallons of boiling water in an iron caldron over a brisk fire. Into this put the lime, immediately adding the sulphur paste. This is rapidly cooked, 40 or 50 minutes, or longer, or until it looks as red as the canned tomatoes. It must be vigorously stirred all the while, when it gets as smooth as glass. Then add a sufficient amount of hot water to make 150 gallons. Strain through fine wire sieve or netting, and apply while mixture is still warm. Use a good pump with a high pressure, and coat every twig. The time to spray for the San Jose scale is in the fall or the early spring, while the leaves are off.
