1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average per day, five times about 1000 times per year. Salt is worth at Chicago 1½ cents per bushel, so it is a great deal better than if the other kinds were used, but a cent's worth more than pays for the difference, and pay for the luxury of having

Diamond Crystal Salt

instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will enjoy when you use salt that is all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. If you make butter, investigate our dairy book. Sent's money in it. Address

Trying to Reduce Expenses.

Husband—This book says that walking is not sufficient exercise, and that arm exercise is too much neglected. So your idea that you get exercise enough trotting around shopping, while hired servants are doing the housework, is all nonsense. Why not discharge the servants, my dear? Your health really needs arm exercise, you know.

Wife—Does it? Very well. Hereafter, when shopping, I'll buy more and carry home the bundles.

Nothing Lost.

Mrs. Youngwife—A friend has sent me a bushel of quinces, and I don't know how to use them.

Mrs. Oldwife—Nothing is simpler. Pare and core them, make preserves of the best pieces, marmalade of the others, and jelly of the cores and peelings.

Mrs. Youngwife—Well, I declare! And what shall I make of the basket they come in.

DECATUR, ALA.

"To fester to have boomed and bust,
Than never to have boomed at all."

"The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley."

"Man proposes, God disposes."

From five to seven years ago millions and millions and more millions of dollars of good Northern "long green" poured into this great South and in the shuffle it is estimated that New Decatur, Ala., caught about 10 millions of those same Northern dollars.

I am stuck on Decatur tho' my friends tell me that in rainy weather I would really and truly be stuck indeed in their red clay. While here I am the relative and guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hoy and am enjoying true Southern hospitality, though the streaks of the city land the first night have been premeditated, still I took no personal hint from the fact that they played "Home, Sweet Home," but stayed my full limit. Notwithstanding the extreme hard times all over the country and the positive deadness of New Decatur, Mr. Hoy has run scentantly his furniture factory and has kept at work all the year from 30 to 40 men.

Decatur's history is exactly like all the rest of the deceased boom towns but to my mind and belief there is a hope yet for this city. Her natural situation on the great Tennessee River with two railroads and a third that will revive when other matters throughout the United States begin to liven, make a future for this place more hopeful than any one of the others. From five to seven years ago Northern capitalists were here in hundreds wild to invest. To-day they are now out and their investments made then won't bring them a dollar for every one hundred blown in. It's the same at many other places only still more doleful. In the first place the Decatur Land & Improvement Company laid the plans, specifications, foundation and ground work for a city the size of Detroit and with a sure prospect for plans to realize in a very short time. The Company at once built a $60,000 hotel, to-day a lady runs it rent free as a boarding house. She can use all of the rooms she wishes and occupies it only that the building can be insured. It has all the latest Northern improvements complete in every detail.

Miles and miles of macadamized roads were made, all neatly curled with four inch stone curbing. A $300,000 water works plant put in having 42 miles of pipe laid. Hydrants two miles from town center, in woods and swamps, go to prove the size of the city—on paper. Aside from the Hoy Furniture Co., running, a chair factory, the I. & R. R. R. shops, employing 900 men, the Oak Extract Works, the following gigantic enterprises with large factory buildings, equipped with the finest and most expensive machinery for their respective manufactures, are dead and useless and expensive monuments to "what might have been:

The Cotton Compress	$100,000
Iron Bridge Works	100,000
Corse Shoe Nail Co.	50,000
Shipbuilding Shop	100,000
Medical Works	150,000
N. Rolling Stock Co.	500,000
Car Wheel Works	2 0,000
Pole Furnace Co.	100,000

The above are all dead as dead can be with no immediate prospect of resurrection. Block after block of business stores are closed that at the boom time rented for $150 per month, now can be had for the asking, and it certainly seems to me that now and right now is the time to invest for anyone who inclines toward the South. The section is bound to set in and those who have the nerve and cash to invest now will be repaid a thousand fold. I'll make no mention of the excavations made for the $500,000 hotel and three or four other business blocks that fortunately did not get fully under way altho' the brick and lumber were at one time on the ground. Nor of the $200,000 opera house that now is only a red hole in the ground. Monroe Co. has just finished here at Decatur a new $10,000 court house for the two Decatur's both old and new, situated just equally between the two cities. In the two cities are about 3 000 inhabitants and they don't hitch first rate, one being of Northern proclivities and old town distinctly Southern, and their union is slow to come. The South disproves the old charge of slowness for they are to pay off the indebtedness in just three years and this makes the average tax payer groan.

My stay here was delightful. I could have remained months, for with kind hospitality, the best of company, fine eating, healthy drinking and the very loveliest climate imaginable, the days passed like a dream.

I started for home Monday morning about three o'clock in company with Mr. L. Corey who had been South looking up his interests, and the ride to Chattanooga was made through a mountainous country in short order, we reaching Chattanooga about 8 o'clock. Our train being about one and a half hours late we enjoyed a hearty breakfast made necessary by early rising and travel. In due time our train for Cincinnati arrived and myself with luggage all aboard and Mr. Corey for the North, looking out of the window I discover Mrs. Quick and a closer search found her to be the genial General B. M. of the C. & G. T. R's, and then I knew that the rest of the good looking people about them was the crowd that comprised the General B. M's annual meeting and were on their way home from St. Augustine, Fla. Upon Mr. Quick's kind, urgent and pressing invitation I recovered my grip and after bidding Mr. Corey farewell I became in reality a general baggage master and claimed my load to be the Birmingham, Franklin & Guthrie R. R. according to the invitation I received from this said J. E. Quick. The meeting for me was most fortunate, for I became one of the party and a guest with the rest, of the city of Chattanooga, Mr. J. C. Howell Superintendent of the Union Depot, an old soldier and mayor pro tem. With him as escort and general informer the day was most delightfully passed. The party consisted this morning of 23 and for the day were guests of the city and through Mr. Quick's kindness—"I went wild tem." The day was all that one could wish, much better than when I visited Chattanooga and Lookout Mount ain a few days previous. With the party we again made the interesting ascent up the incline railroad to the top of old Lookout, and then enjoyed a dinner prepared especially for the railroaders. The hotel, Lookout Inn, is just been opened and is now ready for first-class patronage. Rates from $3 to $9 per day. Our dinner was a poem in the culinary department, after which a drive about the city was enjoyed and at 7:45 in Pullman sleepers we were steadily hauled northward sleeping and common report, good snoring, but Whitey knows it don't snore. Arriving in Cincinnati at 7 o'clock we board the C. H. & D. train and at 9 again are rapidly whitting down the miles between Cincinnati and Detroit and arrived in Birmingham at half past nine Tuesday night with Mr. Quick's Uncle. All tired we stuck out for mother, home, and ham sandwiches.

ECCENTRICITIES CAUGHT ON THE FLY.

Down South "evening" means any time from dinner until twilight.

One of the South's fair maidens on meeting another ditto, will say, "I'll trade last pith you." This means she has heard a compliment for No. 2 and if she (No. 2) will tell of one she has heard for No. 1, she'll repeat what she heard. We fear this encourages Ananaisism.

Upon telling news of any kind your hearer will exclaim, "Oh, Hush!" The Yankee will say instead, "Grate Spunes! You don't tell me?"

Southern ladies don't work, it's disgraceful and caste losing and a beautiful New Orleans widdy was heard to say "No wonda yeh Yankees all grow rich—yeh work."

A child, or any small object of ornament or use is spoken of as a "trick," for instance a child is a "cute little trick."

Here if you are a sloven or sloucby in dress or manners "you are tacky."

HISTORICAL LIES NAILED.

Pocahontas did not save the life of John Smith.

The African king, Prester John, never had an existence.

There never was such a person as Pope Joan, the so called female pontiff.

There is no historic authority for the statement that little George Washington cut down the cherry tree.

The "Man in the Iron Mask" did not wear a mask of iron. It was black velvet, secured by steel springs.

William Tell did not found the Swiss confederation, and the story of Gessler has no historic basis.

Cesar did not say, "Et tu, Brute." Eye-witnesses of the assassination deposed that "he died fighting, but silent like a wolf."

Wellington at Waterloo did not say: "Up guards, and at 'em!" The words were put into his mouth by an imaginating writer.

Richard III. was not a hunchback, but a soldier of fine form, some pretensions to good looks, and great personal strength and courage.

Cesar did not cross the Rubicon. It lay on the opposite side of the Italian peninsula from the point where he left his own possessions and entered Italy.

The story of King Arthur and his round table is a myth, although what purports to be the round table is still to be seen in a South of England town.

Alfred the Great did not visit the Danish camp disguised as a minstrel. There is no good reason to believe that he could either play the harp or speak Danish.

Columbus did not make an egg stand on end to contract his expenses. The feat was performed by Brunelesch, the architect, to silence critics who asked him how he was going to support the dome of the cathedral of Florence.

The peas of Thermopylæ was defended, not by 300, but at least 7,000 Greeks, or, according to Herodotus, 12,000. The 300 were the Spartan contingent, who showed no more bravery than on a occasion than their companions in arms from other Greek states.

ABSOLUTELY BRAINLESS.

The Old Man Tells an Explosive Story to Illustrate His Meaning.

"I suppose," said the old man, "that it is necessary to have just so many people in the world who have no brains. Things wouldn't wag along—there would be no excitement if every man knew as much as every other man. Now, the other day, I saw an example of absolute brainlessness."

Then the old man paused and waited to be persuaded to tell the story. His audience insisted, and he began:

"I was down in the oil country and was talking to a friend of mine who uses naphtha in his business. He buys it by the barrel, and as he was about to order a new lot he walked out into the yard where the stuff was kept and said to one of his men, the foreman: 'Jim, how much naphtha have we got?' The foreman told him that we had two barrels full. There was but a part of one barrel. My friend told this man to find out just how much there was. It was about 8 o'clock, and quite dark. The foreman called one of his men and told him to take a stick and put it down through the bung-hole of the barrel. Then he could see how far the naphtha came up on the stick and estimate the amount in the barrel.

"The man had a lantern and the foreman cautioned him about taking it near the barrel. He told him to put the lantern on the ground at least twenty feet from the barrel, and then go over and measure the stuff with a stick. The man shambled off toward the barrel. He looked at it and found the bunghole, and then put his lantern on the ground fully two rods from the barrel. Then he walked back, pulled out the bung and stuck his stick in the barrel. He pulled it out and deliberately stuck a match to see how much there was. He held the match down over the bung, and instantly there was the biggest explosion you ever heard. We were thrown down by the shock and the man disappeared entirely. They gathered him up in small pieces, deader than a smelt.

"That," the old man continued, "was an example of yellow fat in the place of gray matter. That fellow was very careful about his lantern. He didn't get it near to the barrel, but he struck a match and almost dropped it through the bung-hole. So long as there are so many low foreheads and narrow eyes in this world there will be no lack of news for the papers."

WAS A MUSCULAR PERSON.

An English Divine Who Put an End to an Original Swindle.

A curious case was discussed in an English court recently, says the Jewelers' Weekly. It involved a question whether intentional deception was practiced in labeling a watch and chain as "Gold Watch and Chain." The obvious meaning of the wording, and one to which no exception can be taken, was that both the articles were of gold. A clergyman passing the store in the window of which they were displayed saw the sign: "Gold Watch and Chain, price £1, 1s. 6d" (about $7.50). Considering the bargain uncommonly cheap, he opened overtures for a purchase. Before, however, putting upon it the final clinch, he demanded a written guarantee that the quality of both watch and chain was exactly as represented. Thrust into an ugly position, the dealer was forced to confess that the sign's phraseology was deceptive; the chain was not gold. The admission in this instance was frank. The indignant clergyman made some strongly pertinent remarks. Angered at being entrapped and reprimanded with, the shop keeper threatened to eject his inquisitor. But he made a sad error in enraging the clerical customer, who, it appears, had passed the university with flying colors as a finished athlete.

"Look here," said the old gymnast, "I don't want to take advantage of you, but if you lay a finger on me I'll 'trim' you round the shop. You may take some persons to be old women, but you are in the wrong box this time."

Further he would-be ejector did not venture. A policeman was summoned and the dealer arrested. The magistrate fined him, after which he coursed his way home, a sadder and a much wiser man.

Familiarity Breeds Contempt.

When Mr. Pete Amsterdam returned to his home in Harlem a few evenings ago his two-year-old son Tommy rushed into his arms and expressed great joy at seeing him, while Willie, another brother, kept on playing and paid no attention to his father.

"Willie, is it, Willie," said Mr. Pete Amsterdam, "that your little brother is so glad to see me, while you don't say a word?"

"Yes, it's because he hasn't had you as long as I have," replied Willie.—Texas Siftings.

THOUGHTS.

The right kind of a prayer never stops.

Self-deception is the worst kind of deception.

Love never complains that its burden is heavy.

Anybody can criticise, but only the wise can commend.

The best preparation for behaving right is to think right.

It doesn't make a lie any whiter to put on a tombstone.

Nobody on earth works harder for less pay than the stingy man.

People need religion most when they can't have their own way.

Every time a wise man makes a mistake it teaches him something.

It is human nature to hate the people who show us that we are little.

If all our wishes were gratified most of our pleasures would be destroyed.

There is not much growing in grace by those who are not willing to be gracious.

Hold on to the truth, for it will serve well, and do you good through-out eternity.

We see time's furrow on another's brow; how few themselves in that just mirror see!

Hold on to your tongue when you are just ready to swear, lie, or speak harshly, or use an improper word.

THE FISHERMAN'S OUTFIT.

A Complete Angling Outfit for only 50 Cents! There are two remarkable things about this Complete Outfit. It has never been attempted before; the quality throughout is of the best. No fisherman can afford to pass this offer by, because nowhere else can such an outfit for double or more money.

Read the description carefully.

No. 1. One Fine Polished Brass Reel. This a perfect, riveted brass reel, which works admirably, and when attached to a rod will hold any line in first-class style. This reel alone is worth the price we ask for the entire outfit.

No. 2. One Linen Trout Line, strictly first-class, made of the most perfect manufacture and the strongest trout line made, guaranteed to safely land the heaviest trout or fish of equal size.

No. 3. One Linen Bass or Salmon Line, of the same high standard, but heavier, adapted for big fish like salmon, or gamey fish like black bass. This line will land the biggest fish caught with bait and sinker, or trolling from boat.

No. 4. One Long Cotton Line, dark colored, strong, well-waxed, wound on a block, and good for every-day fishing after perch, catfish, sunfish, rock bass, etc.

No. 5. One Line Furnished Complete with Hook, Bob and Sinker. This is a whole outfit in itself, comprising a long and strong line, with medium-size hook attached, and bait, movable bob and sinker. With bait at hand and this line in his pocket, the fisherman can start fight in and dry his luck.

No. 6. One Dozen Assorted Steel Ringed Fish Hooks (assorted sizes). These are the genuine article of hooks, warranted strong, sharp in points and barbs, and handy to use, anybody being able to tie knot into the ring of the hook. With this set of hooks the fisherman can try his luck for any size fish, from minnows to weak fish.

No. 7. Two Improved Trout Flies. These are the imported style of fly. They will draw trout from deep pools where other flies fail. They are natural, brilliant in colors, strongly fastened around the hooks, and will give excellent satisfaction.
