FAIR STRUCTURES TO COST $500,000

GRANDSTAND AND DAIRY CATTLE QUARTERS INCLUDED IN IMPROVEMENTS

FIREPROOF CONSTRUCTION REPLACES WOODEN BUILDINGS

With a half-million dollar construction program, embracing long needed improvements, in full swing, the Michigan State Fair approaches its seventy-fifth annual exposition better equipped than ever before to present the agricultural and industrial picture of the state.

This fair, the "greatest of them all," says G. W. Dickinson, secretary manager, will begin August 29 and run to September 7.

Three-quarter Century Mark.

Because it celebrates the three-quarter century mark of Michigan's State Fair, one of the first in America, "no stone will be left unturned" to make it the most complete exhibition ever presented to a public, barring possible exceptions such as World Events and the Toronto show.

Under the personal supervision of Mr. Dickinson, a program of improvements including the construction of a new grandstand, subway drive for automobiles, paving and sidewalks, and addition to the Shed and Swine building, a new Dairy Cattle building, Floral hall, remodeling of Agriculture and Horticulture building, additional lighting systems and better side track facilities, already is well under way.

To Be Ready for Fair.

It is a certainty that the entire construction program which also includes general beautifying of the grounds will be completed before the gates swing open for the exposition.

This program is in keeping with the plans of the management to gradually replace ramshackle wooden structures on the grounds with modern buildings of steel fireproof construction and striking in appearance. This year brings the directing heads of the fair nearer to this accomplishment than ever before.

"We'll keep at it everlastingly," says G. W. Dickinson, "until we have the finest group of fair buildings in this country. I see no reason why the Michigan State Fair, leading and most successful of state expositions, should not be housed in model buildings before five years elapse. In fact, this may be accomplished in even a shorter space of time."

$100,000 in Premiums.

Generally, of course, the seventy-fifth annual exposition will be a big improvement over its predecessors. Premiums amounting to more than $100,000 will draw, it is said, the largest entry of the finest livestock ever brought into a judging ring. On the hills and plains of Michigan all ready there are crops in that the growers believe will carry off "blue ribbons and cash premiums" when the competition is declared under way.

"While we are determined that we shall not lose sight for one moment of the educational mission of the Michigan State Fair we are preparing adequately for the entertainment of visitors this year," Mr. Dickinson announces. He is not in position at this time to divulge in its entirety the entertainment program but if we can take his word for it, and we usually can, it will be a "blinger."

Every care in the selection of offerings and awarding of premiums is being exercised by the management. Invitations and premium lists announcing the facts of the seventy-fifth fair will shortly be broadcast throughout the state, reaching prospective exhibitors days in advance of scheduled time, this year.

SMALL TOWN HUMOR AND PHILOSOPHY

By BUCK CAMPBELL

Many a black character is covered by a gilded cloak.

The people who never have time to complain generally succeed.

Disappointment often is in expecting something that goes to the other fellow.

Some sawfully mean men sometimes get to be quite prominent in state affairs.

Some folks are about as reliable as the man who writes the weather reports.

It is much easier to get a wise man to give advice than it is to get a fool to take it.

The money the other fellow has in his pocket is not going to do you or anyone else any good so long as he keeps it there.

If the editor man knew as much about his business as others think they do, there would be a lot of improvement in the country press.

Arnold in His Poetry.

Splendor, music, passion, breadth of movement and rhythm, we find in him in no great abundance; what we do find is high distinction of feeling (to use his own word), a temperance, a kind of modesty of expression, which is at the same time an artistic resource—the complexion of his work; and a remarkable faculty for touching the chords which connect our feelings with the things that others have done and spoken.—Henry James.

IN MEMORIAM

In Loving Memory of dear Junior Bell, who died One Year Ago, July 3rd, 1923.

Just when his life was brightest,
Just when his hopes was high,
He was taken from the world
To a better home than ours.
As some sweet blossom droops and dies
When blighted in the frost
He faded from before our eyes,
And all too soon was lost.
But in God's garden free from pain
Where grows His fairest flowers
We know that we will find again
This vanished bloom of ours.

NIGHT OPERATOR FINDS JOB FULL OF ADVENTURES

"Big News" Usually "Breaks" When Rest of World Is Soundly Sleeping

Do more things happen in the night time than in the daytime? Have you ever stopped to consider how many fires, floods and big disasters occur during the night as compared with the daylight hours?

The night telephone operators know that for constant interest, romance, adventure and mystery, the long lines during the night, were they able to broadcast their ever-continuous message-carrying story, would require a Robert Louis Stevenson, a Phillips Oppenheim, a Joseph Conrad and a Victor Hugo, combined with a composite of Charles Dickens and Charles Dickens on the side, to correctly record the goings-on.

When the Black Tom explosion occurred during the war, it literally turned the night time into daytime, not only in New York City itself, but in the east generally, for the explosion was heard even as far distant as in New England and Maryland. It occurred about 1:30 o'clock in the morning and immediately calls began to come in over the long lines. Soon traffic conditions along the telephone lines were equal to any daytime conditions then known.

Frequently the newspapers relate how Miss So-and-So stuck to her post until everyone else was safe, and usually it is a night operator who is the heroine. Police records alone show how important a part she plays in the world of fires, floods, explosions, burglaries, murders and kindred calamities.
