The Best Place to Live

COMPARED WITH ANY OTHER COUNTRY on the face of the globe the United States is the best place to live.

For instance, in the matter of automobiles, France shows one car to 25 persons, England shows one to 25, Germany one to 55, Italy one to 109, and the United States one to every five persons.

We in this country own 60 per cent of the telephones in the world.

We own 44 per cent of the radios.

We have twice as many homes per thousand of population as compared to the most cultured countries in the world.

The amount of insurance we have in force in our country is double that of the rest of the world.

With only 6 per cent of the world's area and only 7 per cent of its population we consume 48 per cent of the world's coffee, 53 per cent of its tin, 56 per cent of its rubber, 21 per cent of its sugar, 72 per cent of its silk, 36 per cent of its coal, 42 per cent of its pig iron, 47 per cent of its copper and 70 per cent of its petroleum.

These facts and figures argue more strongly for the American System than the eloquence of the most silver-tongued Fourth-of-July orator!

Screenarios

By C. F. Smith

"How can I get into the movies?" is the plaintive cry of thousands of young men and women all over the country. Probably many are just as capable as those who do win contracts with the studios, yet something is lacking; it might be that they have not gone about it right, which, if they are not working now, is a self-evident fact; perhaps they have overestimated their worth. No doubt those who do the loudest yelling are least qualified. Months and years of training are required to give a young actor even the smallest role. Competition at the bottom sometimes is keener than at any other step on the ladder to fame.

Smith

Many Roads To Fame

So this story is in answer to all who would like to know how to break into the movies. We shall not attempt to give direction to the thousand and one circuitous routes by which one finally lands at this destination. This is what the doctor might call a case history, as it concerns a young man whom we know personally. He is a grand nephew of Minnie Madern Fiske. His grand-father was the late Tom Fiske, lawyer for the Long-Bell lumber company.

This boy now has a contract with Columbia studios. Six years ago this summer he was working in the Weyerhauser Timber company's plant at Longview, Washington, as a machinist's helper. When last we saw him his face was smudgy with grease and dirt. His plan as he outlined it then was to come east and enroll in a dramatic school. But he didn't do it, as we shall see.

For another year he continued on the job, then in 1934 matriculated to the University of Washington, where he majored in dramatics. He graduated four years later, well-known for his radio and stage work.

Bicycle For Transportation

He had heard, of course, as had practically everybody else in the United States, of Columbia's search for the lead in "Golden Boy," the stage success which Columbia was bringing to the screen. Arranging through the head of the dramatics department for a screen test in the Hollywood studio, he embarked on that journey with a bicycle as his chief mode of transportation. The bicycle gave up the ghost at San Francisco. From there the young hopeful negotiated the remaining distance to Hollywood by train, as a non-paying guest.

Now everyone knows William Holden is going to play the role of the violinist-fighter in "Golden Boy," and since that is not our hero's name, we regret to say his test for that picture was a failure. However, studio officials liked his test well enough to put him under contract. That was a year ago.

Since then he has appeared in a number of pictures, all small roles. Perhaps his most important was the romantic lead opposite Jacqueline Wells in "The Little Adventuress," starring Edith Fellows. He has just finished a minor role in "Man from Sundown," with Charles Starrett.

The point we should like to stress here is that this boy, after all, was no different from all the rest except that he had a burning ambition and the talent to carry him forward. Luck? He probably had his share. But determination can manufacture luck more quickly and more thoroughly than all the wheels of chance that ever turned.

So begins the career of Tom Potts, dreamer and worker, now Richard Fiske, actor.

Bible School Will Continue to July 28

The Daily Vacation school of the Redeemer Lutheran church, which started sessions July 10, will continue through July 28. The school meets every Monday through Friday from 9 to 11 a. m. at the church, and students are between the ages of six and 14.

For its manuel, the school is studying "Parables of Jesus." Memory work and handwork also are on the program and Bible sewing cards are used by the younger children.

Pick Your Fishing Spot Through Columns Of Newspapers, State Officials Advise

LANSING, July 13—For the angler who has not yet made the catch that will satisfy his yearnings, there is this advice:

"Watch the official reports in the local newspaper on fishing in the past week. Go where these reliable reports show good fishing exists. Don't be reluctant to move from one place to another."

This is the opinion of officials of the fish division of the department of conservation who are cooperating with sportsmen's clubs, tourist and resort groups and newspapers in distributing information each week on fishing results in all sections of the state.

Up-to-date reports are worthy of more dependence than other sources as this method takes into consideration the natural trend of fish development and activity, according to conservation authorities.

They point to the familiar statement of a discouraged fisherman, "Oh, don't go there, that lake is fished out," as an example of advice not in line with fishing records through the years. A general picture of fishing on a long-range basis leads to belief among fish authorities that it is impossible to take all the fish out of a lake by hook and line.

Although a lake may go well for several seasons and then slump there is bound to be a revival of fishing there. That is the observation based on the rise and fall of the annual take of fish from lakes covered by reports to the conservation department.

An instance upholding this contention is a large lake in north-central Michigan where for years the resort owners and vacationers took considerable pleasure from the annual catch of pike. But the pike became scarce, only to give way to a boom in the catch of bluegills and other panfish.

Explanation for this is that the pike while there in great quantities had kept down the supply of smaller fish but as soon as the lake had apparently been "fished out" of pike, the bluegills gained in such numbers that they have kept alive the fishing activity on the lake.

It is believed to be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to exterminate a fish population by hook and line fishing in a limited open season. On the other hand dynamite, nets, poison and other measures can take a heavy toll of fish life. A limitation on fish can be created by lack of proper food, for fish can be produced in water only up to a limit allowed by the type of feeding available.
