ONLY ONE WEEK REMAINS

IN WHICH TO SEE THE GREAT

Passion Play

Now being illustrated daily at "THE HUB STORE." To insure against disappointment we ask as many as can possibly come this week to do so as we are bound to disappoint thousands crowds the last week.

Three Presentations Are Given Daily--

10:30 a. m., 2:30 and 4 p. m.

The auditorium on our third floor, seat first come first served basis, is made quite comfortable for accommodation of 500 people. A second floor room, seating comfortably 250 people, is also provided with a large screen for overflow.

The morning entertainment at 10:30 is always crowded than the afternoon and at this hour you are always assured of a seat. The Passion Play has now been exhibited in our store long enough for people to know that the representation of Christ's life is being presented in a reverent way. The admission is free, the place costs you not a cent, nothing to asking.

Tickets Are Given with Purchases of 50c and over throughout the Big Store and are good at any one of the performances.

MR. JOHN A. BREWSTER, graduate of Chicago Conservatory of Music, is the soloist and is rendering perfectly the music of the Passion Play, with other several new songs. Among them are "Heaven, The Future Home of Our Loved Ones" and "There is a Green Hill Far Away."

ALWAYS INTERESTED WIFE.

Henry Wiseman, who, we gather, is the story teller his wife and his father-in-law accompanied Mrs. Hiess to the woods where she disappeared, was interviewed in Jackson prison by our Evening News reporter Saturday night. He gave first denial that any such incident as the rape of a woman occurred. He gave as his reason for not coming to the city, that he was anxious to purchase a wood lot he had transported. Mr. Wiseman is a ringed less statesman and admitted that Mrs. Hiess had approached him after he was talking to Frank Marvin. He rather in low, just as Mrs. Wiseman and Mr. Marvin have stated. Wiseman, however, insists that he had not, as suggested, left the woman at the woods. He at first said that he had only gone across the road with the woman and pointed out the direction she was to take, returning in time to finish his conversation with his father-in-law. A little later he contradicted himself again by saying that his father-in-law did not leave the carriage. Bonington, who is years younger than his father-in-law, was a strong talker with the women.

Wiseman, who is a farmer, says he had a great deal to contend. He went over his life with Warden Chamberlin and admitted that at his death years he served one. Previous to his present term in prison he had spent his time in Jackson. He also admitted that he had had trouble in Pontiac in a similar case years with a woman who was not his wife.

It has developed that Mrs. Hiess, when she went into the woods with Wiseman, carried a purse in her hand. It and her effects contained the money which she intended paying for the wood she expected to buy of Wiseman, who had come to spend this time. He was only in Pontiac at the time, in fact, the visit of the officers in law on this very day was to engage where he might get a job, and the sight of the purse was an additional inducement to Wiseman to induce the woman to the woods.

GOVERNOR'S PARDON.

If the prosecuting attorney deems that sufficient evidence can be secured it may be that Wiseman can be produced and made to stand trial on this murder, he has four years yet to serve for stealing the cow.

HAVE SERVED TIME.

St. Joseph, Mich., Oct. 14. Robert Hale, who is accused of having lived with Mrs. Hiess in Royal Oak, previous to her disappearance, serve 18 months in jail and then was employed as wood sawyer in Niles. He formed the acquaintance of the Hiess family while in jail in Niles.

ROBERT HALE.

Mulatto who lived with Mrs. Hiess.

In early September, 1900, he came to Royal Oak and opened a small saloon in the village of Sidney, 20 miles southwest of this city. A few days after his arrival of the Hiess family. Hale was in his wood chopping position and came to Sidney to do.

About two in Hale was seen to be doing drinks and deeply, and carrying concealed weapons. He was fined in the county jail in this city to serve a sentence of 90 days. After serving 30 days he was allowed "trusty" privileges about the jail. He made his escape and was later located in Detroit. It appears that Mrs. Hiess met with two small children and disappeared. Through articles in The Detroit Evening News she and her daughters are anxious to learn where abouts of Hale, who was engaged and brought to this city to secure the bail since of his original sentence. Hale before leaving the county jail, said he was a resident of Windsor, Canada, where he intended to return and live. The last heard of Mrs. Hiess by the authorities here was the time Hale was captured at Royal Oak. Hiess still has seen Sabin Hale. Hale was arrested at St. Joseph, Mich., on a charge of burglary, he flashed a roll of bills and the general shot several entries, but he and the carry out his threats.

The hush of death murdered Mrs. Hiess, on being shown the ring found in the Wiseman trouble, presented to Mrs. Wiseman trouble, tracks indicates his wife's wedding ring, and one that is greater 11 years to when he married her. When the News reporter placed the ring the ring the Hiess family, it was recognized as the ring of Mrs. Hiess, on her wedding day. Mr. Hiess, who,
