WSU Opens Dormitory For Women

Birmingham area residents are reminded that applications for admission to Wayne State University's first dormitory — the Helen Newberry Joy Residence for Women—are now being accepted by the University housing office.

The dormitory was ready for occupancy for the winter quarter, for which classes began Jan. 6. The structure represents the initial step in Wayne's plan to house 3,000 students on the campus by 1975.

UP TO THIS TIME, all student housing on campus was provided in buildings originally designed for other uses.

The three-story structure, to house 252 women, is named in memory of Mrs. Helen Newberry Joy, a leader in the cultural, philanthropic and civic life of Detroit. She died in 1958.
