TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

OVERWORK in schools is not confined to this country, it prevails in most places in England. A gentleman wrote a letter a few days ago to the Liverpool Mercury, in which he criticized severely the schools of Liverpool for over-teaching. The day's study, he says, begins at 7:45 a.m., and lasts until 8 p.m. Beheaded, the evenings are supposed to be given to home, and there are no holidays on Saturday. A medical inspector of Birmingham has also called attention to the giddy manner in which the health of the children under his charge is impaired by overwork. He quotes the case of a bright boy who was pushed on in his studies until he broke down under the strain, and who, as soon as he partly recovered, was back at his lessons in ordinary school. It can be found that the schools of this country also abundantly furnish many instances of such fatal ignorance.

A WISE-HEADED sheriff recently remarked: "Many women come into the jail and want to receive talk talk talk criminals, but we have no time for that, and the ones that are not as yet criminals, and keep them from getting such." And only when this is done can those noble-hearted women accomplish anything in the cause to which they are devoting their lives. Christianity must be made a practical every day matter, before it can be made a reality. Those who are experienced by the masses, are those who are most successful.

The following is the report of the sheriff of Birmingham, concerning the death of the child in the hospital passing away:
