DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

NUT PARTY.

"The Brownies," said Daddy, "wanted to give a Party for the Flying Squirrels.

Look Like Brown Nuts.

"So Billie Brownie asked six other Brownies to help him take around the Invitations.

"They did this in a very new and unusual way. In the first place the six Brownies who were to be Messengers wore Suits that made them look like Brown Nuts—of course, rather large Nuts. And over their Faces they wore Masks.

"In their Hands they each carried a large Nut which they had made themselves—and which looked like a regular Nut only larger. Inside each one was an Invitation which said: 'The Brownies Invite the Flying Squirrels to a Peanut, Hickory Nut, Chestnut, etc., etc., Party today. It will be given below the Pear Tree.

"And the Brownies left these Invitations at the foot of every Tree they passed where they knew the Squirrels lived.

"As soon as every Squirrel saw the Invitation in the big Nut—for naturally they would always look inside a Nut—they began to get ready for the Party. They brushed their Tails and smoothed themselves until they looked very fine. Of course, they made their Tails look very bushy, for that was the style they would have told you if you could have talked to them in Squirrel talk.

"And then they began to Fly to the Party. They first Climbed to the topmost Tree of all, and they then began to Fly from one Tree to another, going down and down all the time.

"You see the Flying Squirrels cannot Fly upward. So they are not real Fliers like Birds. But they can Fly down. And it was extremely thoughtful of the Brownies to have their Party under the Trees. They knew the Squirrels would love to come Flying down to it with a great deal of swishing and noise.

"'Well, hello, Squirrels,' called Billie Brownie.

"'Hello,' said the Squirrels.

"And all the other Brownies called out: 'First thing on the Program—'

"But a little Squirrel named Gray Fur said: 'Oh, I didn't think it was to be a Concert.'

"He sounded very sad when he said this, and all the Brownies laughed. 'It's not to be a Concert,' they said.

"Gray Fur looked puzzled, but Billie Brownie went on to explain: 'You see, he said, 'we're to have a Program of events and games and such things—not of Songs and Solos and Concert Tunes.'

"'Oh,' said Gray Fur. 'That's good. I'm not so very fond of music.'

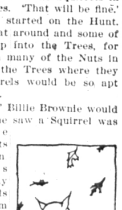
"'I know you're not,' said Billie Brownie. 'But I do know what you are fond of—and if you'll give me time to say it, I'll tell you that the first thing on the Brownies' Nut Party Program is to be a Peanut Hunt?'

"'Oh!' shrieked all the Squirrels in their shrill voices. 'That will be fine.'

"And off they started on the Hunt. The Brownies sat around and some of them climbed up into the Trees, for they had hidden many of the Nuts in the Hollows of the Trees where they knew the Squirrels would be so apt to look for them.

"'Very Warm,' Billie Brownie would call out, when he saw a Squirrel was near a place where many Nuts had been hidden 'Cold, Cold as Ice,' he would say, if the Squirrels were away from the Nuts.

"And little Gray Fur won the Prize, for he found the greatest number of Nuts. The Prize was a very large piece of moss made into the shape of a Nut. They Brushed their Tails and covered with Birch Bark. Inside were Nuts of all kinds.



Their Tails.

"This will do when you need more Food,' said Billie Brownie.

"'Yes,' said little Gray Fur. 'I'm beginning to save up for the Winter.'

"The Squirrels had the most wonderful time eating all the Nuts they wanted, and before the Party was quite over Billie Brownie told them they could take Home as many as they liked if, each time they took a load of them, they would come Flying back.

"So off went the Squirrels with their Nuts, and they came back Flying down from Tree to Tree until they reached Billie Brownie, who called himself the 'Flying Squirrels' Storehouse.'"

Hints for Cyclists.

To clean the enameled parts of a cycle, rub well with a rag dipped in paraffin, and then polish with a soft duster. To clean any metaled parts that have gone rusty mix a little paraffin and bathbrick together in a saucer and apply the paste with an old rag until the rust has disappeared. Polish with a dry cloth.—F. M. Thirlby.
