FORD TRACTORS SELL AT REDUCED PRICE OF $395

Through a mistake at the Eccentric office, an insertion of a wrong electrotype of an advertisement for the Ford tractor appeared last week. The price of the tractor was given as $625, instead of $395. The cut used was one from an old Ford tractor, reseiling the selling price a year or more ago, since which time substantial reductions have been made.

The Conant-Osborne Co., Ford agents in Birmingham, for whom the advertisement was prepared, received a number of inquiries as to whether the price had been advanced. They wish to announce that the price of the Ford tractor is just what it was, and that there is no probability of its being increased.

Mrs. Henry Spicer of Martin Street, and Miss Nicole Spicer of Oakland avenue, spent the week-end with Mrs. Spicer's son in Redford.

Miss Cecil Hart of Argyle avenue, left this week for a visit with her grandmother, Mrs. Clarence N. Dryer, of New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Harford Spears of Grand Rapids, are guests at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. Levi Allen of Hazel street.

The Grand Old Game of Barnyard Golf

An innovation at the Michigan State Fair, Detroit, September 1 to 10, will be the horse-shoe pitchers' championship tournament. Hundreds of entries already have been made, and valuable prizes will be given, according to announcement by G. W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the fair.

THREE GENERATIONS OF BIGELOWS HOLD REUNION

Twins Of Third Generation Act As Host And Hostess For A Multitude

By E. R. Bates

All the delightsome features usually attendant upon home-comings, together with a multitude of the usual, found expression at the annual gathering of the Bigelow family held recently at the old homestead which have marks both the beginning and perpetuity of Bigelow family history in Oakland county, dating back something like a century.

To Isaiche Thomas and maiden Tryphena, twins of the third generation in continuous possession, was the special privilege and pleasure of acting as host and hostess to nearly a hundred Bigelows, big and little, who joined in the pilgrimage to participate in the annual event which, perchance may be the last to be held at the particular spot which holds more of historic interest than any other to the numerous and remarkable family answering to the name of Bigelow. For the march of time and progress are ruthless levelers of historic family trysting places in Oakland county.

Besides many friends, the immediate relatives of the Bigelow family in attendance were: Charles Malcolm, Deford; E. Gravlin, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Sourbray and daughter, Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Clark Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Chase, Linden; Mr. and Mrs. Strickland and son, Plymouth; E. M. Bigelow, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frost and two daughters, Howell; Byron L. Bigelow and son, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones, James Burridge, and grand-daughter, Pontiac; Mr. and Mrs. N. Gravlin, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Gravlin, Birmingham; and Mrs. Hard and son, Mr. and Mrs. Hard and lad, and thus they built better than they knew the house that was destined to shelter generation after generation of their descendants. They reared a considerable family and having served their day and generation passed on, he after having rounded his sixty-sixth milestone, she after having attained the mellow age of seventy-seven years.

Next in succession was their son, Thomas Allen Bigelow, who acquired his brother Levi's interest. Born in Ontario, Canada, July 19, 1829, he had been a continuous occupant of the old home and under his management the estate was finally reclaimed from the wilderness state and transformed into a productive farm property in keeping with the period. He was twice married; on June 16, 1844, to Sarah Benjamin of West Camden, N. Y., to which union two children were born, their mother died March 28, 1847; latterly he was married to Tryphena Malcolm of Ontario, on Sept. 1, 1852, who, prior to her death Dec. 8, 1917, bore him fourteen offsprings, seven of whom still survive to enjoy the prosperity and comforts of twentieth century advantages, together with a local distinction for their almost herculean and Amazonian stature, the combined height of the four sons and three daughters aggregating over forty-five feet—worthy progeny of their brawny sire who stood six feet three inches in his homespun socks.

The old homestead, notwithstanding its numerous additions, became too cramped for continued occupancy by a family with such prolific tendency, and each in turn betook himself to the establishing of his own home until at the time of passing of the elder Bigelow on May 17, 1883, there remained but three to perpetuate possession in the family name.

In due time the old homestead acres were divided, the northern portion since being held by Thomas Bigelow's son, with his maiden twin sister, Tryphena, as continuous to occupy the comfortable home erected by their grandfather in 1835, which has provided shelter for three generations of lusty Bigelows, good citizens, whose brain and brawn and sterling character have been no mean factor in the transformation of Oakland county from a wilderness into a beautiful, undulating park-garden, quite world-famed for its productivity and scenic beauty.

The south portion, falling to Bethuel D. Bigelow, he built for himself and family a home on the town line known as North Farmington road, where for several years he continued the manufacture of clay bricks from the deposit discovered by his grandfather, from which has been produced the material for many substantial homes built in that locality during the past century, and of which there remains a seemingly inexhaustible supply.

Mr. Bigelow has recently interested several prominent business men of Oakland and Wayne counties in the manufacture of hollow building John Paulger, Miss Tryphena Paulger, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Nacker, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nacker and daughter, Redford; Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Bigelow, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Bigelow and two children, Franklin; Mrs. Cassidy, Mrs. Towner, Royal Oak; Mrs. Hardy Myman and son, Malcolm, Traverse City.

The Bigelow homestead was permanently established in 1835 at the intersection of Bloomfield, West Bloomfield, Farmington and Southfield townships, where Indians roamed at will among the hills of Oakland county, and where one ballasty vied with lofty uplands in rugged beauty that challenged the mettle of brave hearted pioneers who could face problems unafraid, and go forward.

Able Bigelow, a Vermonter of hardy Scotch ancestry had taken to wife, Sarah Clark, a native of Massachusetts, and together they sallied forth to hew out a home in the wilderness of Michigan. Their new possession held, besides huge forest timber, a rich deposit of clay. With an ox team to tread the mixture to proper consistency and with hands to shape it, bricks were made tile, of which it has been ascertained a remarkably high grade can be produced, and he is very certain that the hard work and persistent efforts of the Bigelow family, in connection with the property, will have contributed much, as amplified by the business organization that has been formed, toward bringing to the service of the community a high class building material which has not heretofore been locally produced. Assays of the deposit by experts fully justify Mr. Bigelow's optimistic viewpoint as well as his good judgment in declining to allow the property to pass from his possession before an organization could be perfected to develop and operate what now bids fair to prove one of the largest clay products plants within the clay area recognized by official geological survey.
