Hats off to the Gloom Buster, who puts the Kibosh on the Crepe Hanger. He radiates Cheer like a Warm Cat dispenses Purrs and laughs at Worries that cause the Average Man's hair to Curl. The Gloom Buster has a Good Word for Everybody and Everybody has a Good Word for Him, What's More!

Patronize Home Industry.

One of the unwritten rules at royal weddings in England is that everything the bride goes must come from England or one of her dependencies, and there is a tiny gold mine in Wales that is kept in operation, apparently, for no other reason than to accumulate a store of the precious metal for use at royal weddings. It is the manufacture of rings, [illegible] and other useful articles.

Theatres

At the Baldwin Theatre Next week Saturday, Sept. 8th.

Alice Brady and her supporting company of Paramount players with Henry Kolker, director, and his technical staff spent several weeks in the frozen North filming snow scenes for "The Snow Bride," a French-Canadian story by Sonya Levin and Julie Herne which comes to the Baldwin theatre next Saturday, Sept. 8th. The company worked in the vicinity of Tem-Kip, at Lake Temiskeming, of Montreal, in temperatures which ranged from thirty degrees below zero. Frozen rivers, caterpillars and toes were encountered among the mishaps of the troupe, but barring a frostbite or two, Miss Brady escaped lightly. It is explained, "I wore everything including the kitchen stove."

The company completed the picture at the Paramount Long Island studio where all the interior scenes were filmed. Among those with Miss Brady in the North were Mack Swain, G. Pitt, Mae Marsh, Stephen Thompson, Jack Barrymore, Frank Grattion, W. M. Cavanaugh and Margaret Morgan.

Three high class vaudeville acts will be given in addition to the feature picture.

As a fitting prologue to the picture, "Children of Jazz," the management of the Baldwin theatre has arranged for the appearance of "The Vassar Girls", a famous troupe of dancing and singing stage favorites. This troupe will delight the patrons of the Baldwin Theatre before each showing of the picture next Sunday and Monday.

At The Garrick, Detroit

There are some profound truths underlying the myth and satire of "But For The Grace of God," the brilliant Selwyn presentation which will have its premiere the week of September 2nd, at the Garrick Theatre.

For instance—one is tempted to advance a theory, after listening to this play, that the chronic liar is more believable than the so-called "good man," whose efforts and actions are honestly conceived and executed.

The character of "Earnest Steele" is an illustration. "Earnest" is an official "sergeant." Rich, lazy, unscrupulous, playing with morality like a cat with a bird, he lives by lies and indeed has to lie to live. His existence has become a network of prevarications. He hasn't an honest thought in his head—he even lies to himself and believes his own lies.

Lies to him are pleasant little boats upon which his bored ideas may be set adrift.

They are such a part of him that he seems more sincere and to be credited than his more scrupulous associates.

Of course it is in regard to women that "Earnest" lies the most. Married women—especially of the type of "Margaret Sonet" in the play—are his acclaimed prey. He loves to take an ordinary happily wed woman of enough charm and vivacity to amuse him, weave a network of lies about her heart and home, and gradually cut her adrift from all she rightfully belongs to.

His method in doing this is to make passionate love to them, to continually pour romatic fairy tales into their ears, to make them believe in his "hopeless" adoration.

To the Selwyns go the honor of having picked an exceptional cast headed by Violet Heming, Arthur Byron, Estelle Winwood, A. E. Matthew, Pauline Whitson, Kenneth Douglas and others.

At The Baldwin Theatre Next Sunday and Monday, Sept. 2-3

The manners, dress and customs of the folk of the 1850's, are admirably shown in "Children of Jazz," a new Paramount picture, based on Harold Brighouses's play, "Other Times," which will be on view at the Baldwin theatre for two day beginning Sunday Sept. 2nd next. Theodore Kosloff, Ricardo Cortez, Robert Cain and Eileen Percy, all well known screen players, are featured.

The picture was directed by Jerome Storm, who directed Charles Ray's most famous pictures. The adaptation was made by Beulah Marie Dix. The supporting cast is exceptionally artistic.

Three high class vaudeville acts will be given in addition to the above photoplay attraction on Sunday with an entire change of vaudeville on Monday. The performance both days will be continuous.

Isn't It the Truth?

Every man who lives a successful and useful life will find by the time he reaches the age of three score years and ten that he has managed to accumulate a nice little bunch of enemies.
