

No, Thank You, Tom. A man mounted on a splendid black horse was crossing the bridge, and as he rode across it he saw a young man who was looking at him with a curious expression. "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

They met one day, the self same man, and he said to the young man, "I have brought you some money, and I want you to take it." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE HOPPER'S CURSE.

"I shall be ill!" said the young man, "I have a headache, and I don't feel well." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

"I don't know where there is a doctor," said the young man, "I don't want any of your money." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

"I don't know where there is a doctor," said the young man, "I don't want any of your money." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

"I don't know where there is a doctor," said the young man, "I don't want any of your money." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

"I don't know where there is a doctor," said the young man, "I don't want any of your money." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

"I don't know where there is a doctor," said the young man, "I don't want any of your money." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

"I don't know where there is a doctor," said the young man, "I don't want any of your money." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

"I don't know where there is a doctor," said the young man, "I don't want any of your money." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

For the Farmer. "The third horse," said the farmer, "is the best of the lot." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

A HERMIT IN A CAVE. "I have been in the cave for many years," said the hermit, "and I have seen many things." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE LARGEST COW IN AMERICA. "I have seen the largest cow in America," said the farmer, "and it was as big as a house." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE NEW YORK TIMES. "I have read the New York Times," said the man, "and it is the best paper in the world." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE PRESIDENT OF THE NORTHWESTERN. "I have met the president of the Northwestern," said the man, "and he is a very good man." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE BIRD'S-NEST ESCAPE. "I have seen a bird's-nest escape," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE OLD MAN'S WIFE. "I have seen an old man's wife," said the man, "and she is a very good woman." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE BOAT CAPTIVE. "I have seen a boat captive," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE THIRD HORSE. "The third horse," said the farmer, "is the best of the lot." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE LARGEST COW IN AMERICA. "I have seen the largest cow in America," said the farmer, "and it was as big as a house." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE NEW YORK TIMES. "I have read the New York Times," said the man, "and it is the best paper in the world." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE PRESIDENT OF THE NORTHWESTERN. "I have met the president of the Northwestern," said the man, "and he is a very good man." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE BIRD'S-NEST ESCAPE. "I have seen a bird's-nest escape," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE OLD MAN'S WIFE. "I have seen an old man's wife," said the man, "and she is a very good woman." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE BOAT CAPTIVE. "I have seen a boat captive," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

Thousands Harnessed to their Graves. "I have seen thousands harnessed to their graves," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

THE FISHING BOAT. "I have seen a fishing boat," said the man, "and it was a very interesting sight." "No, thank you, Tom," said the man, "I don't want any of your money."

HOPS & MALT BITERS
THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER
LIVER AND KIDNEY DISEASE
CATHARTIC
SARAWAT NERVE
LIFE LOANS AT 4 PER CENT
CONSUMPTION
RUSSELL & CO'S ANNUAL Cancer
For Two Generations