BALDWIN THEATRE ATTRACTION ON NEXT WEEK

"The Bandolero," a romance of sunny Spain is the current attraction at the Baldwin theatre the final three days this week. The performance will run continuously on Saturday, Decoration Day. Five stellar vaudeville acts and the ever popular Pathe News complete the bill.

Johnny Hines in "Conductor 1492," and vaudeville will hold the stage and screen on Sunday only, May 31st, with the regular policy of four full and complete shows being given on this day.

For the first three days of next week, June 1, 2, and 3, Alice Terry will be seen in the Henry King Production of "Sackcloth and Scarlet." Five big vaudeville acts will be given in connection with the above attraction, which will be presented twice nightly, at 6:45 and 9 p.m.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Warner Baxter, Billie Dove and Mary Brian are the stars in "The Air Mail," a thrilling romance of the daring pilots who guide the United States Mail Planes high in the air both night and day. A special 5 act vaudeville bill will be presented with this attraction besides the Pathe News of Current Events which is enjoyed by everyone.

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE," STILL IN DETROIT AT GARRICK

"Abie's Irish Rose," now in its fourth week at the Garrick theatre, Detroit, is making theatrical history in Michigan. Every indication now points toward a summer run for the celebrated Anne Nichols comedy. Seats are selling for the fifth week and the management announces that the show will, at least, stay until August.

In New York last week "Abie's Irish Rose," entered the fourth year of its Broadway run, reaching a mark never before touched by any show. "Abie" now holds the long-run record in America, having played longer in New York than "Lightnin'", its closest competitor.

As for Detroit no show ever stayed over four weeks and only a few ever tarried that long. "Abie" will beat all records there starting next Sunday. The Detroit company is the same one that played for 58 weeks in Chicago and the wise ones are predicting that inasmuch as Detroit is half the size of Chicago the show will linger half as long, a total of 29 weeks.

Long lines of patrons have sought tickets ever since the opening. At the end of this week more than 46,000 persons will have witnessed "Abie" at the Garrick. Never has there been a vacant space since the opening on May. 3.

Carte Blanche

The carte blanche was a "blank paper" authenticated with an authoritative signature and entrusted to someone to be filled up as he may think best. Thus in 1649 Charles II tried to save his father's life by sending from The Hague to the parliament a signed carte blanc he to be filled up with any terms which they would accept as the price of his safety.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

(George A. Moore, of Harmon street, recently sent in the following editorial printed in the New York Times. In view of the recent activities here to safeguard the public against mad dogs, we publish it in the Eccentric.)

The Dog and His Master.

While the dog among animals is "the best friend of man," man too often is not a friend to dogs. The American S. P. C. A. could tell many stories to prove it. Especially is this the case when rabies is reported in a community. Every dog then at large, and not vouched for, is looked upon with suspicion. If he is hungry and footsore, his behavior condemns him as mad and deserving of death. Of course, when rabies is demonstrated, the strictest regulations to protect a community should always be enforced.

At the present time there is a rabies scare in Westchester, marked, as usual, by a widespread dread of hydrophobia. Few reason that the dog may be frantic with pain or harassed by frenzied pursuit, not mad at all. As hydrophobia is a terrible disease, the dog acting queerly is summarily convicted and must be killed by the first policeman who runs him down. Then the dog's head is cut off and sent to a chemist for analysis. For every guilty dog's head there must be scores that convict the mob and the policeman of being bereft of their senses. The S. P. C. A., which is giving seasonable advice about the proper care of dogs and endeavoring to allay hysteria, says that in the last twenty-five years probably a million dogs have been handled by its employees, and that not one of them when bitten has developed hydrophobia. This proves only that the disease is uncommon. It does not prove that cases of hydrophobia never occur.

Inoculation of dogs to render them immune from rabies should be required by the State. Penalties should be inflicted for not calling in the veterinary and getting from him the tag that as an affidavit is attachable to the dog's collar. Local opinion may also require that dogs be muzzled to render them harmless, even to those who annoy and abuse them. It will often be found that a man or boy was the aggressor when a clamor is raised about a biting dog. Hardly ever is the benefit of the doubt given the dog. In every community there are cross and vicious brutes. Some breeds are by nature dangerous. For them there should be shortshrift when a case is made out. It is the fact that many dogs, well bred and of unimpeachable character, deserve better masters than they have. Some way might be found to require better care of the dog, for its own sake as well as for the public welfare. A responsible owner will take his dog for a walk, so that he shall not be at a loose end upon the property of others. In unfenced districts roving dogs are usually a nuisance. The place of the dog is at home when his master is away. If you own a dog, muzzle him humanely, inoculate him, do anything the law requires for the security of other people—but stand up for him when his enemies without provocation conspire to destroy him.
