BALDWIN SCHEDULES FIRST CLASS FILMS

Baldwin theatre presents some fine film attractions for the coming week, starting Sunday, July 18th. Something different in the way of picture entertainment will be seen at The Baldwin Theatre. "Three in Exile", has its first showing in this city. Featured in the production are Rex, the wonder dog, and Black Beauty, the marvelous performing horse, with Louise Lorraine to give it the human touch.

While on Monday and Tuesday, unless you want to miss the most thrilling and entertaining picture Royal Oak has seen in many moons you must not fail to see the William Fox screen version of the international stage success "Havoc." This is Rowland V. Lee's first screen attraction since he directed "As no Man Has Loved" based on "The Man Without a Country", and it is by far the greatest film he has ever made.

On Wednesday and Thursday, "North of Nome", a vivid picturization of life, love and adventure in the frozen north will be shown. It was produced by George Edward Lewis for release by Arrow Pictures Corporation and features Robert McKim, one of the best known "heavies" on the screen, and lovely Gladys Johnston, selected by popular vote as the most beautiful girl in the Alaskan Territory. And to complete the program for the week, Matt Moore and Marie Prevost, two of the deftest comedians of the screen, in the film version of "The Flapper Wife" Beatrice Burton's newspaper serial with a sparkling supporting cast—Don't miss "His Jazz Bride". A fine selection of comedy pictures, Pathe and Fox News, music and other novelties will complete the program.

GARRICK COMPANY TO PLAY IN NEW 'THRILLER'

Mystery, thrills, romance, comedy—these are but a few of the ingredients that enter the next play to be offered by the Garrick Company, which is aptly titled "Shooting Shadows."

This play is the work of Henry Fiske Carlton and William Ford Manley, and had a production at the Ritz Theatre, New York city during the summer of 1924. A four-cornered dispute between authors, producers, actors and director led to its engagement being terminated; it has since been rewritten by Mr. Harwood, the present director of the Garrick Company.

A haunted house serves as the locale of the play, with the shooting of revolvers, ghosts, strange noises, trap-floors — all lending to the thrills, the comedy and the eerie atmosphere that pervades "Shooting Shadows."

A typical small-town guide, gossip, and general utility man has been making capital out of this haunted house. Nightly he has been conducting parties of vacationists to the house, and has succeeded in giving them sufficient thrills to set their tongues wagging, making new customers. Noah, the general utility man, is of an ingenious turn of mind and has conceived certain mechanical contrivances to make the haunted house seem real. On the night the action of the play takes place he conducts one of his usual parties, for his usual consideration, but ere he has been in the house fifteen minutes strange things begin to happen. Poor Noah is more surprised than his guests, and his hair begins to stand on end for his contrivances work to the purpose of murder, strange disappearances, comedy and thrills that cause the goose pimples to rise on the flesh. His perfectly safe ghost visitation turns into reality and criminals, the sheriff and his posse are added to the personally conducted tour of a heretofore innocent haunted house.

"Shooting Shadows" belongs to that strange category of plays best exemplified by "The Bat," "Whispering Wires," "The Cat and the Canary," "The Gorilla," "The Monster," etc.

MYSTERY PLAY, 'THE BAT,' WILL OPEN AT ORPHEUM

"It certainly is one grand show." That is the way the famous critic on Life summed up his impressions after witnessing a performance of "The Bat," the tremendously successful dramatic play by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, which the Dorothy La Vern Players will present at the Orpheum Theatre one week starting Sunday night, July 18. After all has been said and done about "The Bat," Life's critic surely has offered one of the best descriptions that could possibly be given of the play.

"The Bat" is primarily a mystery story. As such, it is unquestionably in a class all by itself. In fact, scores of critics have unhesitatingly called it the greatest mystery play ever produced. But there is real drama and there is comedy in "The Bat." In fact, there is quite as many laughs as thrills during the play and as entertainment, pure and simple, it is 100 percent plus.

The story of "The Bat" never has been told and it never will be if the wishes of authors and managers are respected. The first words which catch the eye when the audience opens its programme form a request that the story not be told. And thus far, although the play has been seen by more than one million persons, it is doubtful if one has ever broken the confidence imposed.

Suffice to say, the story of "The Bat" is well worth while. It must be. No play in years has had quite the success of this play.
