BUSINESS CLUB HEARS SPEAKERS

Club To Discuss Advantages Of Affiliation With State Organizations

Affiliation with the state and national organization will be the topic of discussion at the meeting, to-day, of the Business and Professional Womens club, at the Community House.

Mrs. Ethyl B. Van Etten, state president of the organization, spoke to the club at their meeting last week on the value of affiliation with the state organization. The advantages pointed out by Mrs. Van Etten, are: the wider scope for personal acquaintances, the opportunity of receiving the benefits of the state and national conferences, the opportunities of discussing, with the other clubs of the state, problems of interest to all, and the availability of speakers of note, not only in the business world, but in other fields of activity.

The value of a real objective for the club was also pointed out by Mrs. Van Etten, "A club always benefits from having an objective towards which to work," she said. She suggested community betterment, social welfare or a student loan fund as possible objectives for the club.

Miss Jane Cousens, of Detroit, who was also a guest, pointed out that by affiliating with the state organization the club would be giving to the community instead of just receiving from the community.

John E. Buckberrough, of Route 3, Birmingham, entertained with a supper at his home Saturday night. His guests were: Morgan Gareau, Walter Sparbeck, Edward White, John Moss, Paul Savage, Burnell Ward, Nelson Waltman and Earl Maxwell.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stoll, of Dearborn, announce the birth of a son, Charles John, Saturday, Nov. 26. Mrs. Stoll was Miss Virginia Hartwell and is the daughter of Mrs. Arthur Hartwell of Brown street.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Combes, of Yorkshire road, will entertain 16 guests at a buffet supper at their home Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Thick of Flint, were the guests Sunday of Mrs. Thick's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Koontz, of Bates street.

Honoring their guests, Mr. and Mrs. John Norton Clark, of Rogers Park, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Johns, of Woodward avenue, entertained 10 guests at dinner at the Detroit Yacht club, Friday night. Bebe mums in brown and gold and yellow roses formed the beautiful center piece on the dinner table.

Mrs. Edward C. Smith, of Canandaigua, N. Y., and Mrs. Ralph Wagner, of Rochester, New York, returned to their homes Monday after spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Combes, of Yorkshire road. Mrs. Julian G. Dickinson, Mrs. Coombes' mother, entertained in honor of the guests, at a family dinner at her home in the Indian Village Manor, Thursday night. Mr. and Mrs. Combes entertained at a small luncheon for their pleasure Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wales Price of the Chateau Tea Room are receiving congratulations today on the birth of a daughter.

HONORED

RALPH MACDUFF

Macduff, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Macduff, 610 Kennaway avenue, has recently been elected editor of the Morgan Park Military Academy year book, which the cadets call the 1928 "Maroon and White." In addition to this honor, he has also recently been appointed a lieutenant in the corps of cadets at the Chicago military school. These are both honors, considering the fact that he is a junior and is one of 300 cadets at the school.

Through a Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

On Appreciation

"Don't thank me. I must thank you, for it is your appreciation that makes my work possible." These were the words of a well-known character actress when her audience crowded around to express their thanks.

"It is your appreciation that makes my work possible." In that complimentary remark there is a truth that is applicable to many phases of our every-day life. It has been truly said that "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder." And the reference there is not to the beauty of the imagination, to that which some people can create for themselves, which they see into things which by ordinary standards have none at all. The meaning of "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder" is simply appreciation.

A great deal of our enjoyment of life depends on such appreciation. An exquisite landscape may spread out before us, but if it is not in our eye to see it, it ceases as far as we are concerned, to exist. There are people who will be cheated of the pleasure to be derived from looking at the beautiful scene, simply because their spirit is not in tune to receive nature's message. They lack appreciation. They are akin to those who go through life deaf to the harmony of sweet sounds, blind to the splendor of gorgeous color and line, and dead in their soul to the beauty and finiteness and the bigness of the characters with which they come in contact because in regard to one or all of these they lack appreciation.

Appreciation is a vital factor in our relations with other people. The actress said "without your appreciation I could not have given my performance." And in the simpler relations of every-day life we are no less affected by the attitude of those with whom we come in contact. We all know people who inspire us to our best, and others who, in the vernacular, "cramp our style."

Another word for "appreciation" is "understanding." That is the function of education—to make us understand. It is by education that people learn to appreciate literature, to "understand," to hear, to appreciate music. There is appreciation of people. And it is the branch of understanding that brings probably greatest return in satisfaction and happiness, for it pays in the coin of friendship and companionship and love, in the ties that bind, that enrich life beyond all other possessions.

RANDOM DOINGS of a Random World

Another reason why proofreaders go crazy is seen in a recent A. P. dispatch, which includes this: "Reports from Beyrouth state that Fwaaz Ibn Tawaf escaped into the Nejd region and has accepted the Wahabi religion."

There's no place like home. So thought Joseph McGowan of Belfast, who has spent most of his 72 years in prison. Released the other day after finishing his last sentence, he begged to be allowed to return to his cell, to end his days in the only place that seemed like home. The warden at first refused, but finally gave McGowan a job in the prison kitchen, where he is now happy.

Real mothers-in-law are reputed to enjoy a certain amount of leeway in messing up family affairs, but a Glasgow judge has ruled that a mere prospective mother-in-law must deny herself such liberties. Hence Mrs. G. H. Stewart, who interfered with her son's marriage to Miss Grace Leighton, must pay the prospective bride $750 damages.

Mrs. James A. Stillman of New York flew 450 miles from Grand Anse, Quebec, to Pleasantville, N. Y., and expects to make frequent air trips between her homes in the two places.

Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, was recently received by Premier Mussolini of Italy, to whom she presented her father's translation of Dante's Divine Comedy.

Miss Winnie Nelson of Houston, Tex., is blind, but takes dictation by punching holes through a perforated metal device placed over her note paper, afterward transcribing her unique shorthand notes on a typewriter.

Mrs. Frank E. Hanson, 73, of South Weymouth, Mass., celebrated her 50th wedding anniversary by taking an airplane flight of 25 miles with her husband.

It is against the law in Russia to address a telephone operator except as "comrade" or citizeness."
