MITCHELL FINDS MUCH OF INTEREST DURING WINTER TRIP IN FLORIDA

furled by its owners, Spain, England, and last and best-of-all, America.

Our guide over all this mass of defense showed us some of the Spanish horrors, deep and dark dungeons, full of horror, sorrow and suffering of many prisoners. An early Catholic worshiping room, an oven where shot was heated red hot to make it warmer for the enemy, bullet holes in the walls back of the place where those had stood to be executed, and a room full of curiosities, we saw. One section, donated by Chauncey Depew, of New York, showed two full suits of medieval armor, with thousands of interesting relics.

And after all was over and done, who do you think our competent guide was? A gifted, educated pleasing young lady, representing the local board of St. Augustine, Fla.

Noticing from our register that we hailed from Birmingham, she asked the Missus if we ever knew Mr. Andrew Wallace, of many years ago in Birmingham. Of course we were delighted to say "Yes" and then she told us her mother was Kate Wallace, and then we remembered that the daughter of Andrew Wallace married Oscar Fenn, of Stanton Mich., so she was a grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wallace, and none ever stood higher in regard, respect and esteem in Birmingham's early history than those two valiant far-seeing and hard working people, A. C. Wallace and wife. She remembered and asked about Bert Peabody, Alfa Ford, and some others I cannot now recall.

On To Daytona

After two days here in this most picturesque town of crooked streets, no two alike in direction or width, and after walking Treasury street, the narrowest street in the world, we bade adieu to all and busied on to Daytona Beach.

Our first night here was directly in front of the ocean waves rolling in. Here a beach used for auto racing, 30 miles long, is known all over the world. On our way here from Ormund Beach, we saw the home of John D. Rockefeller, and along his bicycle way we rode down to the beach and as the tide was at its lowest ebb, we had a space 500 feet wide to drive in and our driver told me he made the eight miles in eight minutes, and I believe him, for we passed everything ahead of us until we arrived here.

At the inn while inquiring for the location of a friend, Mr. Ed Perry, the landlord's daugiater said "I am going out Grand View avenue, and will be glad to take you to 300," this being my destination. So she handed me inside her car and away we went. Leaving me at the home of Mr. Perry, she said, "I am coming right back and will take you back to the hotel, if you have finished your call." Nobody being at home, I went back to the place to catch Milady when she came along, when lo! a sedan stopped in front of me and there sat my successor and benefactor, John Hanna, ex. P. M. Successor when I handed him the P. O. at the closing of Cleveland's reign, and benefactor when he handed the job back to me when Woodrow Wilson took the lines.

Both Pleased

I was delighted and so was he. He looked like $2,000,000. Dressed is a black mohair suit, fine panama hat, spats, he sure looked good to me, and on invite I climbed into his car and he took me over to the community play ground, where brother Tom was pitching quoits with the champion of Florida, and holding up Michigan's honor right well. Both of these gentlemen are well, happy and enjoying life. So may it be for many years to come.

From here we drove over to the inn and called on his sister, Mrs Sarah Hanna Purdy, and her son, Max. They are comfortably situated at a popular hotel and enjoying every moment while here. Every hour has something to interest the many visitors from all parts of the United States. Daytona Beach is now composed of the big city Daytona, on the mainland the city Daytona Beach, on the ocean, and Sea Breeze, making one large busy city.

And we have right here plenty of amusements and recreation. Arriving Saturday we attended the Presbyterian school in the forenoon, then to the auditorium in the afternoon, attending a forum meeting where a man discussed education in its branches and answered hundreds of questions fired at him from a full packed house seating at least 3,500.

Filapino Speaker

The next day Vincente Villamin a native Filipino, entertained a larger number of interested hearers, telling of his native land. It was all interesting concerning the troubles, needs and desires of the Filipinos. He answered many questions, and in his mind his people wish for "independence with the protection of the United States." His people do not know of the political questions in this country nor of Republicans or Democrats, and know of it only as America.

He said "Once you fought because of taxation without representation, but they have representation without taxation, having two representatives in Congress at Washington, and there they have no prohibition laws, the only land under U. S. care that does not recognize our dry law."

The speaker was educated in New York, and has a brother a graduate of West Point. He was earnest, honest, and a forceful orator, and only stumbled on the word "juxtaposition."

Wednesday of this week we will listen to Ernestine Schumann Heink, her fiftieth year, celebrating her half century singing to the public, her farewell tour, and something of a golden wedding appearance. Tuesday afternoon this auditorium was packed solid to its walls with an audience belonging to the Michigan branch of the Tourist club.

Mrs. C. H. Murphy, of Lansing president of the Michigan club which stands second only to New York state in membership, made the announcements of the program. Miss Jean Campbell, of Port Huron, sang and Miss Ruth E. Murphy, of Lansing, gave a group of delightful readings.

Pontiac Woman Sings

Miss Edna Smith, of Pontiac sang two numbers, "Homing" and "Trees," in a very beautiful contralto voice, accompanied by Mrs. H. F. Earl, of Detroit, who followed with two piano selections rendered in her brilliant and delightful manner. Six other equally interesting numbers were given and then we, with the immense throng wended homewards. That old-time stage play the "Old Homestead," will be given at the auditorium and all the original "Old Homestead" joy, fun and pathos will be present. We are all going.

Then soon, Will Rogers, America's great humorist entertains at this amusement place and no doubt there will be a big crowd. Among the coming events are the Lions Quartet club, Zimbalist, the violinist, Louise Homer, contralto, Martinelli, tenor soloist, the Russian Symphony club, the Cleveland orchestra, and Elsie Janis. Further deponent sayeth not, except to be added one week of Grand Opera.

And then the old Birmingham friends we have met and enjoyed a social reunion with: Mr. Harold Babcock and his wife, who is the sister of Mrs. Stauch, and who is happily entertaining her sister Mr. Babcock, who lived east of Birmingham near Warren, has a fine home only two doors from our hotel. When we leave here we stop off at Melbourne-by-the-Sea where we hear Dr. Shaw and family are happy and busily golfing, and we hope to meet them there. Further down the coast we will stop off at Palm Beach, and then on to Miami. After that city St. Petersburg. But that is another story.

Daytona Beach

I thought I had run down but there is just one thing I want to tell of and that is the wonderful Daytona Beach. Since back in early automobile days this same Daytona Beach has been a bright spot for the sports lover and the vacationist. On the beach famous drivers have time and again broken world records. Its name is associated with the outstanding accomplishments of such drivers as Barney Oldfield, Ralph DePalm, Tommy Milton, Bryce Brown, Bob Burman, and a score of others.

And it was here, in 1922, or 1923, in April, that Sig Haugdahl established a world's record of three miles a minute or 180.27 miles an hour, and Johnny Seymour in January, 1926, set a new world record for motorcycle speed at 131 miles an hour.

VILLAGE YOUTHS ATTEND OBERLIN

for they are unmolested by the whirl and bustle and enticements of things mundane.

And they like it. They feel no compelling social strain. They are convinced their self-ruling of banishment to automobiles has worked for their freedom and good. Early hours are kept by the women students and social activities conform without undue deprivation.

A basketball game with a neighboring college is not an incident but a real part of life. The whole college play the game and find unlimited joy in the sport. It is an inspiration to be on the team when your whole college follows you with a keen interest and lets you know it by every evidence of their exuberant spirit.

Classes are small and intimate. Professors have time to keep open house for the students. These informal, fireside gatherings are often of more value in their discussion than the more formal classes.

Oberlin is strong in music. One has only to listen to the well-trained choir of students to realize this. And all the sounds of the universe coming forth from the conservatory building when organs and pianos and violins and horns and voices are tuning up and practising, assures one of the large patronage which the music school has.

The campus centers in the memorial gateway to the martyrs of the Boxer uprising in China. Young Oberlin graduates gave their lives then to defend women and children. Today the college maintains a branch in China.

Smile At Youngsters

How indulgently the students smiled when the high school boy who attempts to ape college life was mentioned. Perhaps in their public school days they, too, thought certain styles of clothing or methods of wearing it, and late hours, and a constant whirl, were marks of successful campus life. Their horizon has enlarged and they now know that their previous outlook was only a mirage.

And we have found some Oberlin graduates in Birmingham. They are sensible people who value culture and gracious manners as more precious than the superficial glitter of an instantaneous created industrial aristocracy.

Oberlin has a wonderful history and she keeps true to form with a well deserved pride.
