In the future another evening's entertainment is talked of, which the young amateurs promise even a greater treat than this one. The main feature of this evening's sport was the high bluff overlooking the Saginaw river. We did not know just where to camp and by the time we had looked up a place it was dark, so we spread our blankets and crawled under the steamer which was at anchor. It was not a pleasant place to stay, but we made it answer, and as the night was not cold we got along tip top.

In the morning the boat started down the hill and had picked out for our camp, it was a fine place and we had no need of a fire. I imagine a hill three or four hundred feet from top to bottom and at an angle of about 45 degrees. The steamer stopped to block the wheels and our load being heavy, the horses got started and could not stop, and down the hill they went as fast as they could run. I tell you there was a frightened lot of men there about that time. I expected every moment to see the wagon top over and smash everything all to pieces, but they reached the bottom in safety, and it was over. There was a scared man the steamer was one, but he came out all right and we soon reached our camping ground, and in a short time we had our camp up in good shape.

After finishing fixing up our camp we built a boat so we could cross the river. The next morning, Friday, we started on a hunt, but we got no monkey. We were a frightened lot of men. I had to eat salt pork. Monday it rained hard, so we did not get out, but our tent kept us dry and we were very comfortable. Tuesday we started out early, but we had some venison, as our salt pork was most gone, and Pinder worth had a kick to a fine deer, but he got in the river before he could get at him and feel his nose. But the next morning, Wednesday, we started out again and had the good luck to kill two. Bert and I were killing one and Ford and the other. We were very much pleased for breakfast and supper the next day. Thursday we got no deer, but Friday we got two more, Ford one, and the other, and we were very well satisfied. We were very much pleased for breakfast and supper the next day.

chase. It was started as an experiment and is run by Miss Nota Chatfield. The goods manufactured thus far have been mostly mittens and are of a fine quality and excellent shape. Some of the pricing firm assure us that they could readily dispose of ten times the number they are now turning out, at a very fair profit, and we believe their intention of adding more machines in the near future and going into the business in earnest.

But the next morning, Wednesday, we started out again and had the good luck to kill two. Bert and I were killing one and Ford and the other. We were very much pleased for breakfast and supper the next day.

Thursday we got no deer, but Friday we got two more, Ford one, and the other, and we were very well satisfied. We were very much pleased for breakfast and supper the next day. Monday morning we had a very good breakfast and after breakfast we started on a hunt. We were very much pleased for breakfast and supper the next day. Tuesday we started out early, but we had some venison, as our salt pork was most gone, and Pinder worth had a kick to a fine deer, but he got in the river before he could get at him and feel his nose. Hunting on the Au Sable.

Having made up our minds to have a hunting trip on the Au Sable river, Pinder Worth and myself started on Birmingham Tuesday, October 18, and bought our tickets for that city. It was a dark rainy day, but by that time it was all over. As Hunt we met Mr. Caswell of Thornton, St. Clair county, and William McCarty of Fort Gratiot, with five dogs. At Bay City we had just time to catch a train for East Tawas, where we stayed all night. I had a very pleasant visit with Mr. Robinson and wife who insisted that I should stay all night with them.

The next morning we hired a team and started for the Au Sable river, distant about 20 miles. The country through which we passed was most of the high bluff overlooking the Saginaw river. We did not know just where to camp and by the time we had looked up a place it was dark, so we spread our blankets and crawled under the steamer which was at anchor. It was not a pleasant place to stay, but we made it answer, and as the night was not cold we got along tip top.

In the morning the boat started down the hill and had picked out for our camp, it was a fine place and we had no need of a fire. I imagine a hill three or four hundred feet from top to bottom and at an angle of about 45 degrees. The steamer stopped to block the wheels and our load being heavy, the horses got started and could not stop, and down the hill they went as fast as they could run. I tell you there was a frightened lot of men there about that time. I expected every moment to see the wagon top over and smash everything all to pieces, but they reached the bottom in safety, and it was over. There was a scared man the steamer was one, but he came out all right and we soon reached our camping ground, and in a short time we had our camp up in good shape.

After finishing fixing up our camp we built a boat so we could cross the river. The next morning, Friday, we started on a hunt, but we got no monkey. We were a frightened lot of men. I had to eat salt pork. Monday it rained hard, so we did not get out, but our tent kept us dry and we were very comfortable. Tuesday we started out early, but we had some venison, as our salt pork was most gone, and Pinder worth had a kick to a fine deer, but he got in the river before he could get at him and feel his nose.
