its rightful place among the residential areas of Detroit."

Among accomplishments during his year as president of the Board, Mr. Tillotson cited the fact that a class of realtors had been started and carried forth to study the matter of appraisals; improvements had been made with the Baldwin Public Library to inaugurate a book section devoted more to the subjects of real estate and its various branches; Birmingham has been advertised by the billboards at each end of the town, encouraging the founding of new homes, also by advertising in The Eccentric; helped the village commission on street, park, and alley developments; added many thousands of dollars to the tax roll through new homes, and are ready and willing to work unstintingly to enhance further the physical and cultural values of this area," he concluded.

Ellerby Talks

Mr. Allen, who was suitably introduced by Mr. Tillotson as "one of the finest men I have ever known," next called upon Mr. Ellerby to welcome the banqueters; Mr. Ellerby immediately began to take the realtors to task in gentle fashion for what he termed an "over-selling" of Birmingham to people." He stated that recently he overheard a Birmingham man, engaged in the sale of real estate, outline Birmingham's advantages to a prospective newcomer by referring often to the printed plan of Arthur C. Comey, who was hired several months ago by the village commission to survey Birmingham and recommend its future development. "This real estate man, who does not happen to be present at this meeting here tonight, pointed out park areas suggested and shown on Mr. Comey's report, and lauded the land he sought to sell because of its nearness to the suggested future park developments of Mr. Comey's plan," said Mr. Ellerby. "Obviously, however, you must agree that Mr. Comey's suggested park areas, welcome as they may be to Birmingham citizens, may never become actualities, and I do not see why they should be emphasized as such when selling local property."

"Keep Taxes Down"

Village President Ellerby stressed the fact that Birmingham, because of its mounting tax rate, must become more conservative and frugal in its municipal affairs. "We must 'stop, look and listen' in Birmingham—all of us, and not seek to add further tax burdens to an already too high tax roll," he emphasized. "The village commission already is doing its part to keep down the taxes by becoming conservative, and by delaying certain improvements that are not actually necessary. It costs too much already to live in Birmingham; the taxes in all phases of our government are too high, including state, county, township, and village. In Birmingham we do not need many new improvements; let's pay for what we already have and even curtail on paved streets.

I feel, too, that the village commission should watch the trend of local business, and do all it can to protect those who are already here. I agree heartily with what Mr. Tillotson suggests about a local organization to take the place of a Chamber of Commerce. The luncheon clubs here now are doing what they can, but they are more of a social nature and cannot fill the needs that exist. I suggest, too, that the merchants mix better with the residents, to the end that a better understanding be created, resulting in more home buying. Birmingham is a worth-while community for those who can afford to live here. To you realtors I suggest that, when you sell a newcomer, a home, you so conduct your activities that you make it possible for the newcomer not only to get a home, but many new friends as well."

Kinnison Recites Poems

In refutation of Mr. Ellerby's intimation that Birmingham does not need new improvements, Charles S. Kinnison, well known poet and a resident on Hawthorne road, stated that "Birmingham, in the treatment of its park areas, needs to place less emphasis upon making a spot for Detroiters to come out and picnic, and to create spots of natural beauty that will please the tired eyes of Birmingham citizens who are engaged in business in Detroit." He said that what little park area Birmingham now enjoys is used mostly by people from Hamtramck and Hastings street." He later recited several of his poems.

Atkins Offers Praise

A unique and deserving tribute to the citizens of Birmingham and vicinity was paid in the brief talk of the Rev. Robert S. Macnaas Atkins, local Methodist preacher, when he started right in after his introduction by stating that "I have lived in many towns and cities, yet during my five years of residence in Birmingham I must say that I have never seen a community so collectively kindly at heart, more willing to help others in time of need, than right here. Rich and poor alike join in any effort to alleviate the sufferings, or fill the wants, of those who need help. In my ministry I necessarily get in touch with many phases of life; while in Detroit as assistant to Lynn Harold Hough at Central Methodist church, I was able to touch the cold and hard heart of a city; when I came to Birmingham I was struck with the altogether different attitude of its people, where folks of even the humblest means are most kind.

"Meet The Test"

"It seems to me that the good folk of this Birmingham area always seem to have an extra meal for the sick or needy family next door; whenever the people of this community are put to the test they always do the right and needed thing. May I suggest, too, that in the consideration of members for your proposed civic organization you do not fail to include in its membership the less prominent the active citizens of this community; include in any movement you start the people who toil hard for their living, and who can hardly afford to live in Birmingham, continue to do so because they feel that this community offers something very real and precious for their children. This is a fine compliment to the people of Birmingham and vicinity. In the further growth and expansion of Birmingham its people will have to consider the needs of those who walk in humble paths, who toil in lowly places, as well as those who live upon the hill."

of the cloth when he told you that the amount of brotherhood manifest within any community easily assures the mark of its Christian values.

"Adversity a Good Thing"

"Today, in our complex industrial civilization, we seem to be thinking more and more of returning to something of the original standards that have always been in the heart of this nation. Adversity is always a good thing for those who face life with a desire for the adventure of it all. Prosperity with its ease and luxury turns us from the fundamental issues of life.

"If you want to obtain a clear picture of the present struggle of existence in a big city like Detroit come down to its courts and learn what situations confront men and women, young boys and girls. We are going through conditions that some day, when today's history is written, will be described in the word 'revolution.' And out of this industrial upheaval there is spewed up always the weakest ones who break first under the lash of economic necessity.

"With our people in the United States for national greatness we have not kept secure our strongest, and in our march towards a kind of greatness we have made the criminal fodder that fills our courts and our jails; we have neglected the place that the little home occupies in our midst.

"Starting 30 years ago when Shackleton visited the South Pole and Peary the North Pole, and ending last week when Byrd flew over the South Pole, more acreage of this earth has been discovered than in all the former life of the human race," continued Judge Murphy. "This fact alone reveals a new light, a new life, for mankind. It clearly portrays the ability of man to travel farther and farther than ever before; it depicts new potentialities for the human race—some of them extremely dangerous unless handled with care. Not more than a decade ago the world contained great empires and monarchies which seemed so secure, so imperishably enthroned; now all is changed. Russia lost its Czar and Germany its Emperor. All these changes effect us wherever we may be in the new streams of life and living that are released upon us.

Revolution Here

"A revolution as great as that which has taken place in Europe has taken place in the United States within the past 25 years. It is seen in the change of this country from its place as leader among the agricultural nations of the earth to one that is now the most industrially minded. Twenty-five years ago a majority of our people lived in rural sections, now a great majority of them live in cities, in industrial centers.

"Consider the city of Detroit. In 1890 it contained 180,000 people, and now we boast of 1,700,000 citizens. Through the genius of the imagination of then young men like Ford, Chalmers, Dodge, and others, Detroit has become the 'miracle city' of the world. Industry has brought Detroit's present population from all sections of the world. Here you will find 250,000 Polish people, a greater number of Poles than exists in any city in the world except Warsaw; you will find more Hungarians in Detroit than in any city except Budapest; more colored people than the population of any other city in Michigan, and you will learn that 51 per cent of its school children are but one generation removed from the immigrant ships. Detroit is being looked upon as the frontier of the social change that is coming to the world; we must watch it carefully, and in so watching we must be insistent that we include along with our mortar and brick, stone and steel, the cultural influences and values of life —never forgetting that men must live happily, wherever they are, if they are to be held together in what we call the social order.

WE HEARD IT SAID BY—

George S. Yaples, executive secretary of the Community House: "You will be surprised to learn how often it is possible to change the attitude of a boy or girl toward his own life, as well as his relations to others. Kind and sympathetic understanding of the problems of boys and girls, plus the correct remedial measures, will entirely transform the one who needs it. We are constantly in need of readjusting ourselves to the changing social and industrial progress of the times."

"Not long ago the civic leaders of Detroit allowed two of its finest influences to slip away in the personalities of Lynn Harold Hough and Reinhold Niebuhr, preaches. Why should not Detroit's Board of Commerce have aided in keeping these two spiritual forces in Detroit?—for man does not live by bread alone.

Women Suffering

"I have never seen so many first offenders as our courts have before them. Especially true is this of young girls and women who are charged with prostitution. Most of these offenders are women who come from early home influences of a good kind, but who, when economic necessity forces them to obey the law of self-preservation, break down to the level of their offense. Recently a woman, the mother of four fine children, was brought before me on a prostitution charge. I asked her why she had so disgraced her children, her husband, and herself. Her answer was startling, yet in keeping with the problems that confront industrial centers. 'My husband is over 45 years of age and no Detroit employer will hire him; I sought aid from your so-called organized charities and was given two dollars a week; I couldn't get a job myself, and I couldn't stand by and see my four children go hungry.' That was the pitiful plight of this woman who, in all her previous life, had done nothing wrong before.

"Inability of a man past 45 years of age to get work is industry's latest cruel and inhuman treatment of men; something must be done about this situation. There are some before me old men, and even young men, who wish to be sent to jail for the winter, because they cannot find work. We have become mechanical in our attitude toward charity; we give a sum of money, and forget the value of personal service in this highly industrial era. No longer do we find the old, passionate flare for human betterment; we have become dulled during the past 10 years of our efficiency of mankind. We have forgotten that we must do things with people, and not just for them.

"One of the most beautiful demonstrations of real Christianity today is the Salvation Army, which plays a fine part in aiding needy people. We, as a nation, must remember that no system or method that can be conceived will surpass or even equal the old-fashioned method of every person being a friend to his neighbor; we must cultivate and plant our own gardens if we would have flowers. Each must do his part."

OIL STATION MAN FREED

The case against John Henry, 47 years old, 442 Central avenue, Pontiac, charged with stealing $60 from the cash drawer of a gasoline station in Royal Oak, was dismissed Wednesday on examination by Justice Henry W. Harper, when it was shown that Henry merely took the amount owing to him by his employers. Henry was arrested by Patrolman Joseph MacGregor and George Johnson of the Birmingham police on a request of Royal Oak police who reported that the gasoline station had been held up and robbed.

LIBRARIAN ON TRIP

Mrs. Nancy B. Thomas, librarian of the Baldwin Public Library, and her son Ralph, a student at Cranbrook School, will spend the holidays in Escanaba, Mich. On her return, Mrs. Thomas will stop at Chicago where she will attend the midwinter sessions of the American Library Association.

You may have fire insurance—but is it adequate in proportion to the present value of your property?

If your property value has increased, thereby increasing your equity, your insurance should be sufficient to protect you from loss in case of fire.

Let us examine your needs without obligation.
