TRAP TON WEDDING.
Twenty Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Deane.
The first intimation we had of it was the receipt of a neat, tasty card printed on tin foil, setting the date for Friday evening March 27. We studied it over carefully and a few salient facts were in the mental panorama then passing before us, like hot bolts from a steamed pile, viz: That never did things by halves; that Hat was a pattern house; that there was a big ball room over at the National and—well, it goes without saying, that when the evening hour arrived we were to be seated, but not so surely but a large and select crowd were already there enjoying themselves at their fullest extent with pastimes of various sorts, 'from progressive cere in the parlors to tripping the light fantastic in the hall room upstairs to the inspiring music of the orchestra directed by Sherman and Wilde. Our first duty was an inspection of the presents, with which one of the large tables in the dining room was piled high. A few of the guests had clubbed together and existing in large amount of good taste, in preference to buying a lot of tin ware as is generally done in such cases, and duplicating present after present, they had ordered a beautiful silver tea set of five pieces, with the following appropriate verse attached:
We wish Mrs. Deane to be ever
As sweet as the flowers she ever sees,
And as pure as the snow on the mountain
Side, so that she may give the fairest
To the best of her kind and wisest.
