Two Local Girls Choose This Week to Tell of Marriages On April 5th

Joanne Billings, Glenn Waggoner Name This Date

It was to have been just another bridge club get-together, the party Joanne Billings had Tuesday evening at her home on Lakeview avenue. No one even guessed that there was anything any more important in the air.

But this innocent little party turned out to be the engagement party of the hostess who also at that time divulged the news that her marriage to Glenn C. Waggoner, Jr., is to be solemnized the first Saturday in April—the fifth.

Guests at this party were Kathryn Walton—who will marry the same day—Mrs. Philip Carey, Rhoda Medbury, Betty Lee, Janet Stanley, Helen Ann Riddell and Genevieve Gay.

Joanne, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Billings, graduated last May from Stephens College where she belonged to Theta Tau Omega and Glenn, whose parents are the senior Glenn C. Waggoners, of Henley drive, attended Lawrence Tech.

County Club Women Will Meet on Friday

Friday, the Oakland County Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its regular monthly meeting at the Community House. The session opens at 10 o'clock in the morning with a report of the social-welfare committee, Mrs. H. C. Askins, of the Clawson Woman's Club will give the report.

Following a brief business session Mrs. R. H. Bravender, of the Holly Monday club, will introduce R. E. Addis of that community. Mr. Addis is the president of the Michigan Branch of the Sons of the American Revolution. He is the author of the recently published book, "Reintroducing Our Signers of the Declaration of Independence." Friday morning his subject will be on some phase of applied education.

After a luncheon which will be served at the Community House the group will again convene. During the afternoon the Clawson Woman's club, the Oxford Literary Study club, and the Rochester Woman's club will combine in an instructive and entertaining program.

clique of girls in New York that does nothing but this kind of work and they command fabulous fees. "But there is nothing like that in Detroit," she continued. "Only strictly corn stuff here. We aim to please Mr. Public and we're not at all concerned with Mr. and Mrs. Van Public."

Type Has Changed

In the past four or five years Betsy has changed quite a bit, photographically. She has changed, she says, from an animated brunette into a glamor girl that looks superb in the back seat of say, a Cadillac. She is a mite older, has lost quite a bit of weight and has learned not to smile so broadly. That is the answer, she says.

Being a woman I was considerably concerned with what modeling requires in the way of good looks. There is really no answer to that one, Betsy insisted. She works with girls that aren't particularly attractive, she says. But those girls have learned that grooming can often be substituted in the place of natural beauty.

Being photogenic often has nothing to do with attractiveness, I was told. Sometimes the prettiest girls take the most atrocious pictures. It is just something that the camera lenses do or don't do to you, she insists.

Betsy, who lives with her husband, Earl A. Maxwell, in a little apartment on Townsend avenue, says that modeling is exceedingly interesting work although it certainly isn't the easiest way to earn a living. But in weighing the pros and cons she's not at all sure I told me, that she would like to do anything else.

"It's a lot like the newspaper business, you know," she gave as that strange skill, "you meet such interesting people."

Joy Lackie Wed Last Saturday To Howard Setter

Joy Margaret Lackie, of Birmingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lackie, of Red Axe, and Howard Alenzo Setter, son of the John Setters, of Birmingham, were married Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Methodist Church by the Rev. Charles C. Boaman.

The bride's gown was an afternoon frock in powder blue with full length sleeves gathered at the wrist. The frock had a square neck line, with white lace and a fitted bodice. Her hat was small and blue with a tiny blue veil. The bride wore a corsage of white roses and sweet peas.

Attending the bride was Mrs. Clyde Field, of Saginaw, whose gown was a simple navy frock of satin, blue accentuated by a lighter blue facing on the lapels. Her hat was a darker blue. Also had a corsage of pink roses and lavender sweet peas.

Best man was Raymond Barnes, of Hazel Park. Ushers were Chester Lackie, brother of the bride, and Gordon Davis, of Detroit, the bridegroom's brothers.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Lackie wore soldier blue with a rose colored hat and accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Setter chose navy blue with touches of white.

Following a reception at the Community House the couple left on a week end trip through Northern Michigan. They are at home now on Cottage street, Pontiac.

Guests were present from Port Huron, Saginaw, Bad Axe, Brown City, Yale, Marlette, Grosse Pointe, Auburn Heights and Detroit.

Suits are definitely set for the spring. Practically every model has a long jacket although it may be mannish or softly feminine.

Pan-American Books Subject Of Lecture Here

The highly significant books which have come out recently bearing on the important necessity confronting this country in acquiring an intelligent and sympathetic understanding of our Pan-American neighbors will be the subject of Olive Deane Hosmer's fifth lecture in the University of Michigan extension series on contemporary literature and drama.

The lecture, to be given at 8 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rackham Public Library, sponsored by persons interested in public and library work for Oakland County, is entitled "The Pan-American Prospect: Our Neighbors to the North and South." Miss Hosmer will trace in her lecture the growing understanding between the North and South Americans, the problems arising from this and those of Canada, as set forth in Alfred Eisenstaedt's "Americans Face South," Carleton Beals' "Rivers of Revolution," Gordon Casseldy's "Canada's Neighbors," Frederick Simpich's "Canada's Northern Frontier," Mark Sullivan's "Our Times: The Turn of the Century Years," Carleton Beals' "The Crime of Cuba," Beals' "The Caribbean Danger Zone," by Fitz-Roy Carrington, "Pan-American Highways," Henry A. Wallace's "Sowing the Land," and "Pan-American Neighbors," Carleton Beals. She will also discuss "Rise of Mass Production in World Democracy," by Rexford G. Tugwell, "Latin America Today," by John Gunther, and "Latin America: The Land Nobody Knows," by Carleton Beals,
