Deer Trees Bobcats Which Killed Fawn

ALPENA—The fall's biggest bag of bobcats—three kittens weighing a total of 28 pounds and their 25 pound mother—was taken by W. E. King on his farm 11 miles west of here, but the shooting of them was really a victory for a doe that defended her slain fawn.

On their way to bring home the cows from a woodland pasture, King's 2-year-old son Eugene and his cousin Donald Septer heard the doe snorting in the woods, called their father. King went at once with his shotgun and relieved the doe of her unequal battle with three well-placed shots, after seeing how she kept the kittens treed in three separate trees, charging one after the other when they tried to come down to feed on the fawn.

A trap set by the dead fawn the next morning caught the mother bobcat by a foreleg, and King shot her also.

Don't Stop Us

Two thoroughly inebriated men were driving like mad in an automobile. "Shay," one fumbled his words, "be sure to turn out for that bridge that's comin' down the road toward us."

"What do you mean, me turn out?" the other retorted. "I thought you was drivin'."

Lt. Commander Ben Micou Is Subject Of Article in Naval Station Newspaper

(Editor's note—Many friends in Birmingham will be interested in this article about Lt. Commander Ben H. Micou which appeared in a recent issue of "The Cloudbuster," newspaper at the Navy pre-flight school, Chapel Hill, N. C.)

THE SUPPLY OFFICER

By B. G. LEONARD, JR., Sp.3c

His features, bold, purposeful, bustling manner and inevitable cigar, bring to mind more than faintly the impression that he is a younger edition of England's Churchill.

The story of Lt. Commander Benjamin Hall Micou, Supply Officer of this pre-flight station, strikes a chord that approaches an expression of the deepest American spirit. A successful business man in time of peace, he has twice responded to the call of duty when his country was threatened; and his destiny has been allied with the Navy.

Born in Washington

Benjamin H. Micou, was born in Washington, D. C., Feb. 18, 1895. His early education was completed at Western High of Washington, after which he matriculated at Cornell University. Most notable of his student enterprises was his work as business manager of the magazine, "The Cornell Widow." He was a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, and was graduated with the class of 1916.

With the commencement of World War I creating a demand for qualified leaders, the president of Cornell was given the authority to nominate two men for officers in the regular Navy and two for the Marine Corps. Offered his choice of these appointments, young Micou decided to accept which ever appointment could co-effected most promptly. The Navy moved first, so the man we now know as Lt. Commander Micou narrowly escaped becoming a Marine, and was commissioned an Ensign, U.S.N.

He arrived in Washington eager to begin duties as yet unknown to him. Shortly thereafter he was assigned to the Supply Corps and attended the Supply Officers' School during the summer of 1917.

His first assignment was aboard the Jupiter, at that time a collier, but subsequently converted into an aircraft carrier and renamed the Langely in one of the Navy's first experiments with seaborne aircraft.

"Where's Micou?"

Near the close of his service on the Jupiter, our supply officer became involved in an incident that kept the ether waves disturbed and the wireless warm. The fabulous Cyclops, scheduled to make a trip to Panama, completely disappeared at sea. The Cyclops, incidentally, remains today the most baffling mystery of the first World War; it just vanished, and neither friend nor foe has been able to fathom the puzzle. In the place of the Cyclops, the Jupiter was ordered to Panama in March, 1918.

On the eve of embarkment, Lt. Commander Micou received orders detaching him from the Jupiter; but he remained on board by order of his commanding officer, who insisted that he could not be spared. When the ship was halfway to Panama, the wireless began to clutter in the wild clamor, "Where the — — — is Micou, and why?"

On his return to New York, he was transferred to the transport Service and assigned as Supply Officer on the Agamemnon serving in this capacity from May of 1918 until October, 1919.

After the Armistice, and with the ship out of commission, Lt. Commander Micou offered his resignation. It was accepted, and he was transferred to the Fleet Naval Reserve. Moving to Detroit, Mr. Micou established an insurance business of his own, and continued to operate this business throughout the years that followed.

Serves Connection

Gradually the press of business activities forced him away from the Navy, and in 1934 he finally severed his connections with the Naval Reserve, having been inactive for many years.

Before Pearl Harbor, Mr. Micou was operating a business specializing of late years in pensions, which was reaping the benefits of years of careful planning and hard work. Immediately after Dec. 7, the supply officer applied for and received his commission as Lieutenant Commander, U. S. N. R., and left his business interests.

There is the story of the old Roman who left his plow in the middle of a furrow when he learned Rome was at war, and left his legions to victory, then came back to finish the furrow. Our supply officer's story is thoughtfully striking in similarity. One day he will be back to gather up the threads of his civilian life.

But not until his war job has been well done . . . .

1943 Gardening Can Begin Now

Tag ends of the 1942 Victory garden can be tied up for the season and some of the preparations for that 1943 garden can be started before severe winter.

Suggestions of P. H. Bowser, vegetable gardening specialist on the Michigan State College extension staff, indicate some of the jobs.

Extra vegetables should be put into proper storage for winter consumption. Root crops ought to be dug. A house basement with no heat, hotbeds or cold frames, buried barrels or outside pits and trenches can be utilized for storage. Most vegetables, Bowser explains, keep best when stored between 34 and 40 degrees Fahrenheit in moist conditions with some ventilation.

Onions require a cool, dry, storage with good ventilation. Only mature and sound onions should be stored.

For 1943, Bowser suggests preparation now. If gardens were bothered by insects and disease, crop remnants should be cleaned up. If possible, a new garden spot should be selected for next year.

Fertilizer supplies are to be curtailed. Many gardners can store up an extra plant food supply by making compost piles of leaves, manure, straw, tankage, and peat. Composts mixed with manure can be mixed up this fall with superphosphate at the rate of one pound of phosphate to 10 pounds of manure, plus the composting material. Next spring this material can be spread over the garden soil at the rate of one pound to 10 square feet of garden surface. Worked in well, the material puts thriftiness into garden plants, makes cultivation easier and conserves moisture for plant use.

Christmas Mail To Be Slow—Unless

The Post Office Department now is starting the most gigantic task in its history—the movement of a deluge of Christmas parcels, cards and letters while maintaining the regular flow of millions of pieces of mail daily to and from our armed forces all over the world.

"If thousands of our soldiers, sailors, marines and civilian friends are not to be disappointed at Christmas time, the public must cooperate by mailing earlier than ever before and by addressing letters and parcels properly. The best efforts of the Post Office Department alone cannot be enough, in view of wartime difficulties faced by the postal system. The public must assist," it was said.

About 25,000 experienced postal workers already have been taken by the war services. Arrangements are under way to add thousands of temporary personnel to postal staffs, but this man power is hard to find and is inexperienced.

The free-mailing privilege granted to members of the armed forces has raised their mailings some 30 per cent, it is estimated. Expansion of those forces also is adding rapidly to the postal burden.

The deadline already is past for mailing gifts to Army and Navy personnel overseas with assurance that the parcels will arrive by Christmas.

The Post Office Department is making strenuous efforts to avoid such a terrific jam as it faced in 1918 under similar conditions, during the First World War. It can succeed in those efforts—and avoid many heartaches for its patrons—if the public will cooperate by mailing early.

Note On Spying

A "radio spy" has been developed by the United States Navy to keep track of enemy ships. Still we doubt if the machine will ever wholly supercede the blonde.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Kiln drying of lumber was first employed in this country near Norfolk, Virginia, in 1879.
