U. of D. Ready for Alma Friday Game

Coach Charlie Baer, of the University of Detroit, with three weeks of intensive drilling already completed, began to point his Titan footballers toward Friday night's opening battle against Alma College at U. of D. stadium.

"We are fairly well set as far as our fundamentals are concerned," Baer said. "Our team play and our timing are still a bit ragged. We have been polishing up those details this week and also have built a defense against Alma's formations."

Game situations, punt scrimmages, punt returns, play sequences to be staged when the ball is located in certain parts of the field, and extra point and place-kicking drills have been emphasized, the coach pointed out.

Baer reported his Titans were in good physical shape, without serious injuries. Frank Pitlosh, 214-pound end from Hamtramck, who spent most of the fall practice period on the sidelines with a knee injury, reported back into action last week, apparently fully recovered. With the addition of Pitlosh, the Titans' end problem is materially lessened.

New U. M. Extension Courses Open Oct. 8

The fall semester program of the University of Michigan Extension Service opens the week of Oct. 8 at the Rackham Educational Memorial, Farnsworth and Woodward, Detroit. Advance registration begins Monday, Oct. 1, and the business office will be open until 9 p. m. Monday through Friday during that week.

The Detroit Extension Center is serving an ever-increasing area of southeastern Michigan. During the 1944-45 season, a number of persons enrolled in the extension program from Birmingham, which was one of 62 in this part of the state to be so represented. Many of these communities were in the immediate metropolitan area, but students also came from Algonac, Ann Arbor, Clarkston, Flint, Lake Orion, Lapeer, Milford, Monroe, Oxford, Plymonth, Pontiac, Port Huron, Rochester Saline, Waterford, and Ypsilanti as well as from this community. It is expected that improved transportation facilities will result in an even greater out-of-town enrollment this year.

The University's program makes it possible for students working on advanced degrees, particularly in the field of education, to do a large part of their required work in evening classes. Hence it attracts students even from the Ann Arbor area who could get the same work on the campus only in a daytime program. In addition to these courses on the graduate level, an extensive non-credit program also offers both cultural and practical courses, as well as some that are recreational. There is also a large number of credit courses, as well as some that are recreational. There is also a large number of credit courses on the undergraduate level.

This year's program will be highlighted by the courses in adult education to be conducted by the nationally known educators, Dr. Harry A. Overstreet and Bonaro Wilkinson Overstreet. Details about their courses as well as a bulletin listing other offerings and announcements of special features of the program will be sent on request from the Detroit office of the U. of M. Extension Service, 60 Farnsworth, Detroit 2, telephone Temple 2-7400.

Reconversion

The Germans are beating their steel helmets into cooking utensils. Here a worker collects an armload of the 10,000 or so salvaged each month for processing into saucepans and pots.

Here a hausfrau demonstrates the finished product. The part that fans out over the neck and face has been cut off and a handle fitted into ventilation holes on each side.

Lindo Moore Says New Books Tell of Use of Music For Your Health; Many New Books Now Ready At Baldwin Public Library

By Linda Moore

Our grandfathers knew all about music soothing the savage beast, but it took modern science to really work on the whys and wherefores of it. If you can believe the Temple University findings, music has a direct effect on the human organism. Experiments there lead you to believe that you can throw out that bottle of tonic and try a dose of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," instead—it steps up blood pressure, pulse and breathing wonderfully. Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodies are fine for the heart, but Weber's Invitation to the Waltz, on the other hand, has a soothing effect.

That's only one of the wealth of fascinating bits of information to be found in "Music for Your Health," by Edward Podolsky, newly added to Baldwin Public Library. In the main, the book deals with the effect of music on the human system, mental and physical, but there are chapters on the use of music in treatment of the sick, in mental hospitals, in war shock, even its use as an anesthetic. Seems that very soon now the dentists will have jettisoned that old "This won't hurt a bit" for "Anchors Aweigh," please Nurse," and follow it with "The Stein Song" . . . this may take a little longer than we expect.

Two other books of interest to music lovers recently added include "The Music of Latin America," by Nicolas Slonimsky. Scholarly, but not ponderous, this traces the rise of the South American music from the primitive Indian to the present day. Included also are vignettes of well known Latin American composers.

For children is the charmingly illustrated "Songs for Children" by Victor Herbert. Arranged and edited for young voices, the collection includes such favorites as "Won't You Be My Playmate?", "Mother Goose," and "Toyland."

Some of the new novels look promising. Leading the list is Thomas Costains "Black Rose," a long adventure-filled account of a young Englishman's journey to Far Cathay in the 13th century. You may take exception to what looks like meddling with historical fact, but it's good reading anyway.

"Charity Strong," by Marguerite Allis. Absorbing, sometimes humorous story of a young girl's battles against a strait-laced 19th century puritan community in her efforts to become an opera singer.

"Prelude to Delilah," by Vladimir Jabotinsky. There was a lot more to that story of Samson and Delilah than we realized. Unexpectedly good reading.

"Heritage of the River," by Muriel Elwood. Pioneer story laid in the French and Indian wars. Has everything—settlers and Indians, ambushes, the Redcoats—I'll say nothing of a love story.

"The Passionate Prude," by M. C. Baines. Real people—the turbulent Plantagenet family brought to life by a clever author.

"Marie of Moscow," by Phil Stong. Well-fictionized biography of the amazing Catherine I of Russia who worked her way up from the gutter to become empress.

"The White Tower," by J. R. Ullman. The fortunes of men brought together in neutral Switzerland a motley group of five men and a woman. To forget the war—or perhaps because of it they essayed climbing White Tower, the great Alp, which had never been conquered. An unusual and powerful novel.

INJURED BY TRUCK

One of the unusual accidents of the week was that of Philip Ingraham, 910 Harmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Ingraham, who was injured when struck by a milk delivery truck in his own yard the other day. The wheel of the truck ran over one of the lad's legs.

Why Do We Still Have a Community War Fund?

Sure, the war is over . . . but your dollars are urgently needed to carry on this work in Victory!

For our own community . . .

V-J Day hasn't stopped the Community Fund from doing its job! War or no war, the work of local health and welfare agencies must go on.

Lots of our servicemen's wives still need prenatal care. Many families rely solely on the help of our visiting nurses. Others depend on our hospital and clinical services. And there's still the problem of keeping our youngsters off the streets . . . and out of trouble.

Part of every dollar you give goes to support these vitally needed local activities.

For our millions still in service . . .

V-J Day hasn't stopped the work of the U.S.O.! They've got a bigger job to do than ever.

The boys still in service will tell you that the battles with boredom are tough, too.

And the boys are learning just how tough they can be. Occupation troops in Germany and the Far East. Troops waiting their chance to get a ship home. Wounded veterans waiting to get well enough to leave hospitals.

That is why U.S.O. Camp Shows have been asked to increase their entertainment programs to keep up the boys' morale. U.S.O. Clubs in Hawaii, the Philippines, Alaska, and in the States, must still bring a touch of home to men away from home. A large part of every dollar you give to your Community Fund helps the U.S.O. carry on.

For our friends and allies . . .

The end of the war hasn't ended the fight against hunger and disease abroad. Relief must continue.

The Chinese, the Filipinos, many peoples of Europe who fought on our side, are facing the hardest winter they've ever known. As President Truman has said, "Unless we do what we can to help, we may lose next winter what we won at such a terrible cost last spring. Desperate men are liable to destroy the structure of their society to find in the wreckage some substitute for hope."

Yes, there can be no real and lasting peace as long as starvation, sickness, and fear stalk the world. Part of every dollar you give buys food, medicines, clothing, for our friends and allies. And by helping them you help yourselves.

You give only once to your Community War Fund . . . representing all the 19 agencies of the National War Fund. So give generously. In Victory, your dollars are still needed!
