Civilian Defense Efforts Start In Southfield Schools

A definite civilian defense program is underway in Southfield township schools, according to Superintendent Glenn Schoenhals.

Faculty members recently viewed a film, "Pattern for Survival." In addition, a pamphlet entitled "You And The Atomic Bomb" was distributed to each teacher at that meeting.

Approximately 60 faculty members are also receiving regular weekly first aid treatment instruction in the Southfield 10 school, corner of Berg and Ten Mile road.

SCHOENHALS ATTENDED the Southeastern Michigan conference on civil defense and citizenship education at Michigan State Normal college, Jan. 16.

The superintendent pointed out that the adult education department will soon sponsor a community wide meeting on civilian defense. In addition, first aid instruction will be offered, for which registrations will be taken Jan. 29 and Feb. 5, at the Southfield 10 school.

Schoenhals appealed to parents to help make children feel that the school and home are working together, and that every effort will be made toward their safety and care in case of an emergency.

He added, "Children need person identification. It is suggested that the child's clothing be marked with his name and address. It can be done with indelible ink, moistened indelible pencil, or commercially manufactured name tape. Every piece of clothing should be marked, but it is especially important to mark the underclothing."

Gets Wayne Degree

Eugene Hesz, 812 Ridgedale, will receive his M.A. degree in business administration, with honors, at Wayne university's commencement exercises Thursday evening, Feb. 1. The program is to be held in the coliseum.
