Infected Trees Start Citywide Inspection Tour

With two positive identifications of Dutch Elm disease in Birmingham and three in Bloomfield Village, City Forester William Lebold is again asking residents to help protect trees from this killing disease.

He said that all trees in the known areas would be sprayed immediately by the city and asked property owners to arrange to have privately owned trees treated, too. Names of approved companies may be obtained at the city hall if desired.

Lebold said one infected tree was on Eton near Cole, and trees south of Bowers, east of Torry, north of Sheffield and Banbury and east to the city limits should be treated this month.

The second tree is on Henrietta near 14-Mile and involves the area bounded by 14 Mile to the south, Grant to the east, Northlawn to the north and Maryland to the west.

TWO OF THE Village trees are near Birmingham city limits and trees in the Westwood area, east of Cranbrook, north of Midville, west of Chesterfield and south of Pine should be sprayed.

The second is on Cranbrook near Quarton and in Birmingham trees north of Raynale and east of Chesterfield should be sprayed.

"The state is sending in a crew this week to work with the city department in checking all elm trees in Birmingham," Lebold said.

"We will have two or three men checking every elm tree, whether in a back yard or on city property. Residents whose trees are found to be infected will be notified so they may take corrective measures right away."

LEBOLD SAID residents could help check the spread of Dutch Elm disease by destroying every bit of dead or dying elm wood on their property.

"This applies to backyard woodpiles, fallen twigs, leaves and branches, brush piles and the like where the beetle can seek shelter and breed. These, especially brush piles, are the worst offenders in the spread of the disease.

"Owners who value their trees will do well to watch for limbs which appear to be dead or dying and have them removed right away, then have the whole tree sprayed. The loss of one tree will cost far more in beauty and comfort of the home than the cost of spraying several," Lebold said.

He added that at present the number of infected trees in the area is not serious but the disease can and will get out of hand if nothing is done about it.

Detroit Food Company Pays Second Court Fine

For the second time within a month the Mathew F. Klein company of Detroit has paid fines amounting to $100 in Birmingham's justice court.

A warrant signed by James McCollum of the Michigan state agricultural department, charged Klein had used 11.8 per cent of powdered dry milk in the making of ring bologna. The legal limit according to McCollum, is 4 per cent.

On June 15 Klein was fined $100 on a warrant signed by McCollum, charging the illegal use of a preservative in sausage.
