Cabbage and Kale

1 lb. kale
Boiling water
1 lb. cabbage
1 teaspoon salt
4 bacon strips
¼ cup minced onion
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ cup vinegar

Clean and wash kale. After draining, place in kettle; add boiling water to ½ inch depth. Bring to a boil. With a sharp knife halve cabbage, shred. Add to kale, then add salt; toss with a fork. Cover, cook about 15 minutes stirring occasionally. Saute bacon in frying pan, drain on paper towel. In same pan saute onion 1 to 2 minutes. Remove pan from heat. Drain vegetables, chop fine. Turn into frying pan, add sugar, vinegar and pepper. Heat slowly, stirring about five minutes. Serve sprinkled with crumbled bacon.

Cottons for Fall and Winter Wear Dominate College Trunk

Cottons with a young point of view, styled for career and college girls, are now being shown in stores. These winter-weight cottons, created with a weather eye to fall and winter wear are featured in a great variety of outfits for round-the-clock wear, reports the National Cotton Council.

Old friends like corduroy and velveteen are transformed this year by rich-toned color combinations and a variety of printed patterns that give them a new look. Denim continues on its versatile way with original styling in color and pattern. New texture is achieved by flocking designs, some in dot patterns, others in embroidered-like designs.

NOVELTY SURAHS and reps, rich somber cotton tweeds, supple cotton serge and worsted-type suitings offer a variety of fabrics to please the most discriminating taste.

Topflight American designers have made the most of this glamorous array of cottons. Putting to use all their ingenuity, they have created outstanding fall and winter outfits for school, college and career girls.

MANY OF the new clothes are styled with a sense of humor. Take for instance those crazy pants and vests. Style-conscious women have long loved the tapered pants designers dreamed up several years ago. But not until this year has the array of pants been quite so humorous. Bright red bandana-printed corduroy is used for one pair of pants. In another pair, plain-colored corduroy is accented by rows and rows of rick-rack which give the pants a harlequin air.

Half and half styles are featured; one leg in a brilliant colored velveteen, the other leg in sharp black. Ensembled with these for dorm study hours or at-home TV-viewing are velveteen halters and camisoles, or vests.

VESTS THIS year bid fair to lead fashionables a lively pace. They are made in a variety of cottons, including rich tapestry weaves, printed or plain corduroys, cotton tweeds, brilliant plaids and small, neat, tailored prints.

Vests are effective when ensembled with lounge pants or when worn with suits or separate blouses.

That extra "plus" touch which designers have been giving to their cottons is noted again in this season's clothes.

A famous creator was inspired by the lavish embroidery of the Renaissance, and his velveteen evening skirts and separate jackets are completely encrusted with the rich patterning of embroidery.

COTTON TWEEDS and suitings are shown in tailored dresses for day and town wear. The coat dress, always a favorite, is doubly important this year in heavy, colorfully woven cotton tweed.

Cotton suitings and denim are the choice of one designer who makes a bulky type of jacket which trims down to a neat hipline.

Buttered Beets and Celery

1 cup cooked beets
2 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon vinegar
½ teaspoon sugar
Outside stalks of celery
½ cup water

Cut beets in quarters and put in saucepan with butter, vinegar and sugar. Keep hot until ready to serve.

Cut outside pieces of celery in ½ inch pieces and boil until tender. Drain and season with one tablespoon of butter.

Pile in center of vegetable dish, surround with beets.

A SALUTE to PROFESSIONAL ACCOMPLISHMENT
Pharmacy Week
It is fitting that the nation set aside this week to honor the Profession of Pharmacy—a true science that has contributed much to the advancement of civilization and the well-being of mankind. From its crude beginnings thousands of years ago—up to the miraculous accomplishments of the Twentieth Century—Pharmacy has aided mankind in achieving a longer, healthier and happier life. Working hand in hand with its partner profession—Medicine—Pharmacy will continue to bring the advances of the healing sciences to the community it serves. And toward that end, we pledge our continued interests and efforts.
