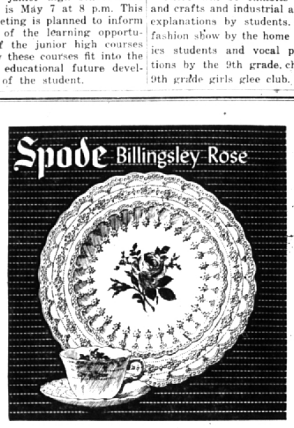
"In The Very Heart of Birmingham"



This pattern was named for William Billingsley who designed its delicate rose sprays about 1800. Today these sprays are painted by hand by Spode's finest china painters. The lace-like embossing of the Jewel shape, which was modelled by an early Spode artist from the halo of a saint in the 16th Century Italian painting requires the utmost skill in potting. Billingsley Rose is suitable for any period and its feeling of daintiness and delicacy can be emphasized by the use of a lace cloth and careful choice of accessories.
