LATER Altschuler said, "Campbell should investigate the facts. I protest this waste of time," referring to Campbell's request for information on standards used for grouping.

On the integration of Lathrup school seventh grade classes, the board noted that two such classes are housed at McKinley's school also.. Both schools are elementary schools.

Some of the parents of the Lathrup seventh-graders object to their children being "left" in an elementary school 'Lathrup) and claim they lack the "advantages" of being housed in junior highs. They also claim their children need the companionship of larger groups at their own grade level.

The board said if Lathrup seventh-graders were shifted to Birney, as was suggested by parents, the parents of elementary students at Birney would probably their object.

BOARD MEMBERS also noted the cost of converting the elementary rooms at Birney to house junior highs, if requests of parents of Lathrup seventh-graders were complied with.

Schoenhals said parents of the latter students were given the opportunity, following a meeting Sept. 13, to transfer their seventh grade children to Birney or Northbrook.

The first section of the seven-part resolution was acted upon at an earlier meeting when the system was put on a six-three-three basis. This formally makes the seventh grade an integral part of the junior high system.

The Monday meeting discussion was scheduled to include a report on the curriculum study committee, made up of the board acting as a whole.

Schoenhals will make his report on the six-part resolution within 60 days.

Audit committee chairman Bernard Ziessow reported a two-year review of the treasurer's books. Village minutes were in good order he said.

Making only a few minor suggestions, Ziessow did, however, recommend that professional auditors be engaged for this job in the future. He also urged the village to consider hiring a clerk to handle routine village financial accounts.

"Our audit represents six full days of work and it is too much to expect of volunteer services. The treasurer's job is also becoming so complex it is unreasonable to expect qualified individuals to continue volunteering without competent help," he said.
