Attorney's Death Brings Adjournment of Hearing

The unlikely happened Monday night.

After last week's meeting, all indications were that Birmingham city commissioners would conclude this week a public hearing on the Island View parking lot.

But commissioners again adjourned the hearing on the assessment roll for the lot to be built behind the Reid Building on Woodward near its junction with Hunter.

However, they had good reason to do so.

Commissioner Carl F. Ingraham said he had been informed that the attorney representing property owners in the assessment district had died. He said the land owners were asking for an adjournment.

Ingraham then moved to adjourn the hearing until Feb. 13. His motion carried unanimously.

HARRY COHEN, ATTORNEY representing property owners involved in the special assessment district for the lot, died Sunday after a heart attack. He had presented their views at two of the recent commission sessions.

Edward W. Pugh, of H. & L. Reid, Inc., said Cohen had met twice with property owners in iron out their stand on the matter.

Commissioners had been expected to approve Monday night the assessment roll based on a ratio of 92½ per cent of participation of cost by property owners and 7½ per cent by the City.

This ratio had been determined at last week's meeting after months of disagreement between the owners and the commission on the extent of City participation.

COMMISSIONERS had contended that the lot was being considered only on the basis of property owners sharing the entire cost. They contended, however, that the City should share in the cost.

A plan calling for the City to pay the $8,000 cost of parking meters for the 141-acre lot and a subsequent one calling for the City to pay 15 per cent of the total estimated cost of $135,000 both failed.

commissioners then came up with the compromised 92½ - 7½ ratio, and harmony prevailed as they approved it unanimously.

What will happen between now and the Feb. 13 resumption of the hearing remains to be seen.

Hearings Set For Feb. 6 on Alley Pavings

Hearings of necessity will be resumed before the Birmingham City Commission on Feb. 6 for proposed Woodward Ave. alley paving projects.

Under consideration will be paving of an alley on the west side of Woodward from Lincoln to Bird and one on the east side from Ruffner to Sheffield.

Total estimated cost of the first is $47,700 and the second, $37,700.

The alleys run in back of business establishments.

Commissioners had tabled the hearings on June 6 to permit the city engineering department to complete construction plans and cost estimates.

AT THIS week's meeting, they moved to take the matter off the table and to resume the hearings Feb. 6.

Commissioners approved a request by Marvin G. Hahn, owner of a building in the Leinbach-Humphrey Woodward Avenue Subdivision to include his property in the assessment district for the improvements. It had been left out due to an oversight.

Taken under advisement was a suggestion by City Engineer William T. Killeen to purchase a triangular piece of property that would permit removal of a jog in the east alley. Total cost for acquisition and paving was estimated at $138.
