

Guiltless a Woman. Paris Correspondence New York World. A woman has been guillotined in France for the first time in fifteen years. The circumstances attending the execution were hardly revolting, as were also the circumstances attending the crime. The woman had murdered her old mother, whom she considered a burden on her. She took every precaution to hasten the success of the murder. She first saturated the old woman's clothing with oil, then set fire to her and hid her death with a long stick while the dearest old creature was roasting to death. The old woman cried pitifully for mercy, but the heartless daughter held her down till she was hurried to a crowd murder with blasphemy, she placed a lighted candle before the statue of the Virgin, as an act of thanksgiving for the successful issue of the murder of her mother. The inhabitants of the town, Lamartin, in which the crime took place, were thrown into a state of impatience and excitement. The authorities had much difficulty to prevent people from mobbing the prison and lynching the prisoner. A speedy trial and trials in France are always speedy—alone excluded. The populace. The woman was promptly condemned to death.

The French, as is known, are repugnant to the death sentence, and French juries come in for much rough riding on account of "extreme circumstances." But, in this case the trial was over before their trial would have been given. The first trial in France is over before the official character of the prosecution, and only when a person is relatively innocent of a crime.

On arriving on the fatal spot a dead silence fell on the multitude. The woman was ordered to descend from the vehicle, but she did not respond to the summons. She had to be dragged from the vehicle, and she stood in the morning light. On her way she recovered her senses and screamed and roared. She was promptly placed on the fatal instrument, and her head thrown through the guillotine. Her screams were drowned by the shout of the assembled people. The guillotine on the instrument, despite the efforts of the gendarmes to keep her back, she held up her arms and held up her little boy at arms length to let them witness the execution of the murderer, that they might remember the reason for it.
