

BIRMINGHAM, MICH.

Mr. Thomas Garfield, brother of the late president, was in Cleveland the other day on his way home to Grand Rapids, Mich., from New York, where he had been to see his dying mother.

Speaking to a reporter he said: "I was removed to Orange when I was six weeks of age, and I can well remember when all that part of my life was a wilderness. I remember when put a single tree had been cut on the present site of Chagrin Falls. After leaving my mother's home in Orange, I cleared up a farm and established a home which I am now enjoying. I live about four miles from Grand Rapids, and do not often visit the city. On such occasions I usually transact my business and return home as quietly as possible. Never having heard my mother's name, I had expected to visit Mentor in much the same way. No one recognized me on the way there, but a number of persons have spoken to me to-day. I spent three weeks at Mentor, but I nature my duties at home was such that I was unable to remain longer."

The Country's articles on "Ranch Life in the Far West," which will be in the February number, are not only written, but illustrated also, by the author. The illustrations have been prepared all by the author, and are as interesting as the text. The illustrations in the first number of a full page picture of an attack upon a company of soldiers by the Indians at Fort Huachuca, Cal., "Cowboy Jim," "Pulling a Cow out of the Mud," and another full-page picture of "Heron's Nest Building." The illustrations in the forthcoming number will be an article by Gen. Sherman on "The Grand Strategy of the War of the West." The illustrations in the forthcoming number will be an article by Gen. Sherman on "The Grand Strategy of the War of the West." The illustrations in the forthcoming number will be an article by Gen. Sherman on "The Grand Strategy of the War of the West."

Arguing About Liquor.

The question of the constitutionality of the present liquor laws was argued in the court at Grand Rapids, Mich., on the 10th inst. The case was argued by Judge J. M. Smith, who is now presiding over the court, and by the attorneys representing the various parties. The case is still pending, and it is expected that it will be decided in a few days.
