Prince Oscar's Romance.

The Crown Princess of Sweden, who is a daughter of the Grand Duke of Baden, and a grand-daughter of the Emperor William, had among her maids of honor a young Swedish lady, Miss Munck, known for her beauty, grace and charming manner. Wherever she went she was admired, and while with the Crown Princess in Germany she even attracted the attention of the Emperor William, who was always a worshipper of the fair sex; but although of noble birth, Miss Munck was poor and an orphan. Her father, Col. Munck, had left her a long line of ancestors, all good, but not very little money. Eventually Miss Munck, yielding to the pressing advice of her friends, accepted an offer of marriage from a wealthy young officer belonging to a crack cavalry regiment, and everything was prepared for the wedding. The day was fixed, the "trousseau" was bought and presents had arrived, when suddenly Miss Munck broke off her engagement for reasons which convinced her that she did not possess the exclusive affections of her suitor. She resisted all attempts at a reconciliation and retired from court for some time. When she returned her former high spirits had gone, and her face bore an expression of melancholy, which, however, enhanced her beauty considerably. Meanwhile Prince Oscar had been for a two-years' trip around the world in the Royal Swedish frigate Vanadis. Shortly after his return his friends discovered that he was in love, and the fact likewise became evident to Miss Munck herself. She could not fail to be sensible of the admiration of the gallant and handsome young sailor prince. But what was to be done? According to the Swedish constitution any prince marrying outside the circle of royalty forfeits his rights to the throne and his privileges as a member of the royal family. Miss Munck, listening to what she believed was the voice of duty, again left the Swedish Court. She announced formally to her relatives her intention never to marry, and assumed the garb of a nurse, and the charge of a ward in one of the large charitable hospitals of Stockholm. Prince Oscar at last succeeded in meeting her, and finally, after a long struggle, he wrung from her the confession that she loved him. Still the brave girl refused to marry him, and it was not until the prince could tell her that the queen had been moved to give her consent that finally she yielded, but the king's sanction had yet to be obtained. In vain did Prince Oscar at first plead that as his brother, the Crown Prince, had already two sons, his own chances of ever ascending the throne were practically nil, and that he, ought to be allowed to abandon the privileges of royalty and to become a private citizen; but as time wore on and the king saw that his son could not be influenced in the matter, his majesty was induced to yield, principally owing to the entreaties of the queen, who was on the eve of an operation from which she was not expected to recover. The king could not resist this appeal from his beloved wife, whom he feared he was going to lose, and thus for the first time for 300 years, a prince of Sweden will marry the daughter of a private gentleman. In virtue of the Swedish constitution Prince Oscar will lose, besides his rights to the throne, his titles of royal highness and Duke of Gotland, the yearly allowance granted by the Swedish Diet and his palace at Stockholm. He will in future be called Prince Bernadotte. He will retain his position as commander in the Swedish navy, which rank he has earned fairly in the ordinary course of promotion. The prince, it may be added, seems to be the happiest of men.—London Telegraph.

A PECULIAR CASE.

Refusal of a Man to Allow His Daughter, sick with Small-Pox, to Be Taken to the Pest-House.

An incident of peculiar interest, and one which may be made a test case, transpired in Oakland yesterday, says The San Jose (Cal.) Herald.

Among the recent victims of small-pox in the city is Miss Delia Merrill, a daughter of W. B. Merrill, a wealthy citizen living at No. 1443 Linden street. Health Officer Crowley gave notice that the patient must be removed to the pest-house. Mr. Merrill protested and declared that his daughter should not be removed. He consulted a lawyer, and the health officer was served with a legal document stating notice as follows:

1. That I am not in indigent circumstances, but that I am able and willing to provide my daughter with proper care, medicines, and all necessaries of said illness.

2. That I am willing to maintain as long as necessary in front of my said premises a yellow flag required by the ordinances of the city, and to pay the expenses thereof.

3. That I decidedly object to and will not consent to the removal of my said daughter from said house.

4. That I will not be liable to you, or the city of Oakland, or to any person or persons whatsoever, for any expenses that may be by you incurred in placing a guard about or near my aforesaid premises to prevent persons from entering or approaching my premises.

5. That I will use all reasonable efforts within my power to prevent any person from entering upon my premises as aforesaid, and to prevent the spread of the disease in any manner whatsoever. W. B. MERRILL.

Yesterday afternoon, under the instructions of Mr. Adams, a force of men was sent to guard Mr. Merrill residence and vigorously oppose any attempt on the part of the health officer or his agents to remove the girl to the pest-house. Among those who are guarding the house is a constable, who is instructed to arrest any person who attempts to enter the house after being warned. The small army is now awaiting the coming of Dr. Crowley or his agents, and what the result of the meeting will be remains to be seen. Attorney Adams says that all his actions in the case will be within the law.

The code provides that "homeless and indigent persons" may be sent to the pest-house, and it is believed that Merrill's position will be sustained should the matter culminate in law proceedings.

Puritanical Persecution.

In September, 1698, the General Court of the Colony of Massachusetts decreed that not one should "take any tobacco in any inne or common victualing house, except in a private roome there, so as neither the master of the same house nor any other guests there" should "take offense thereat. Which if they do, then such person is fourteth to forbeare, upon paine of 3s. 6d. for every offence."

This statute comes under the head of what the people of Massachusetts now call "the Old Blue Law." Nevertheless the Rev. Mr. Wassail, of Mendon, Mass., has been recently dismissed from his pulpit because he was in the habit of "smoking a pipe in secret."

Just 250 years, therefore, after the Colonial Court laid down a law regarding tobacco smoking which seems to possess some elements of justice and leniency, we find a Massachusetts minister who is obliged to suffer severe punishment for doing that which the Puritan lawmakers directly countenanced by statute. For the law of 1698 says plainly that a man shall be permitted to smoke so long as he thereby offends no one in his immediate vicinity.

Now, if the Rev. Mr. Wassail had been in the habit of smoking his pipe in public, or had blown through the streets of Mendon the nauseating odor of cheap cigars, there might have been some slight excuse for the action of his parishioners.

But Mr. Wassail always secluded himself when he lighted his pipe, and never, even in the secrecy of complete retirement, did he so far forget himself as to smoke a cigarette.

When, therefore, the narrow-minded congregation over which he has presided since in its absurd wrath and says that Mr. Wassail must go, the reverend smoker becomes at once a martyr and is entitled to the sympathy of all just and reasonable men.—New York World.

Harper's Magazine for March opens with an article, by Edward Bowen Prescott, on Spanish art and artists, which is not only instructive, but interesting in the highest degree. Fortuny, Zamacois, Alvarez, and Villegas are names known to hundreds of Americans who have been privileged to see the interior of the galleries of private picture-dealers of New York, as well as to all artists. The Vanderbilt collection is especially rich in works of the Spaniards. For a long time Spain seemed to have no modern art, but suddenly, as Mr. Prescott points out, Fortuny and one or two others sprang to an eminence which they have ever retained. Strange as it may seem, in view of the generally accepted theory that the Spaniards are a lazy lot, these artists are not only remarkable for excellence, but for the great industry by which they have attained it. Mr. Prescott's article is profusely illustrated by numerous full-page reproductions of the pictures of the leading workers whom he mentions. They are carefully engraved that the characteristics of the painters may readily be noted. "The Last Recess in Algiers," published by Barbour, serves as a frontispiece for this number of the magazine.

"BISMARCK" is the subject of a brief but timely paper which is to appear in the March Century. The author (the article is anonymous) is of the opinion that so long as Bismarck is chancellor,—that is, so long as he lives, for Kaiser Wilhelm will be likely to take the responsibility of displacing him,—things will probably continue to run in the accustomed course. The question is, who or what is there to replace Bismarck when he too dies appears? There is no minister living whose measure twice been so often defeated in parliament as Bismarck's; but as he is responsible only to the King and Kaiser, the German parliament cannot drive him from office by any direct or implied vote of want of confidence. Two portraits will accompany the paper in the February, one of them an engraving of the bust by Reinl.

GEN. LEW WALLACE has half finished a novel treating on the time of Mohammed.

THE widow of the late Mayne Reid, the widely-known and popular novelist, is engaged in writing his life.

AMONG the latest inventions is that of a match which may be used over and over again an indefinite number of times, the wood being, it is claimed, soaked with a peculiar chemical solution.

MANY of Colorado's most experienced sheep owners have concluded that flocks of wethers, until the animals are 6 or 7 years old are fully more profitable to hold than a flock of ewes, the winter death loss is so much less with male than female sheep.

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING, according to the short notice her husband has added to the new edition of her poems, was born at Calton Hill, Durham, her uncle's house, in 1806. She was at the time of their marriage 40, while he was her junior by six years.

THE practice of covering clusters of grapes by placing paper bags about them commenced some five years ago, and resulted in producing fruit without spot or blemish. Recently several gardeners have bagged tomatoes and the pears produced on dwarf trees with equally good results.

THE late John J. Flannigan, city editor of the Utica Observer, attended twenty-seven hangings reportorially, and on one occasion persuaded the condemned to be swung off two hours earlier in order that he might get home in time to put an account of the event in the next issue of his paper.

THREE hitherto unpublished letters by Beethoven have just been discovered, and are printed in The Vienna New Free Press. They are of no artistic importance, and merely deal with the chronic impecuniosity of Beethoven's scapegrace nephew. The yare, however, issued with all their imperfections, and they prove that even a great composer could not spell.

THE Ellenville Glass company, near Albany, N. Y., has been experimenting with powdered grass as a substitute for sand in making glass, and finds that it is excellently adapted to such uses. Granite from the Shawangronk mountains is used, and the company is fitting up its works to grind the flinty stone. Several of the bed-plates used for the grinders weigh over fifteen tons each.

BY means of recently invented processes in the manufacture of rifles as many as 120 barrels can now be rolled in an hour by one machine. They are straightened cold and bored with corresponding speed, and even the rifling is done automatically, so that one man tending six machines can turn out sixty or seventy barrels per day. With the old rifling machines twenty barrels were about the limit of a day's work, but the improved machines attend to everything after being started, and when the rifling is completed rings a bell to call the attention of the workmen.

THE construction of a perfect pendulum has been accomplished, it is announcedby suspending a lead shot by a single fiber of cocoon silk in a vacuum produced by means of a Sprengel pump. The shot, one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter, weighs one-third of a gram, is suspended by a two-foot fiber, and is placed in a tube three-quarters of an inch internal diameter. It has a vibrational range of one-fourth inch on each side of mid-position, the vacuum being equivalent to one-tenth of a millionth of an atmosphere.

FLEETWOOD, WARD, and W. H. Wilson, of Chillicothe, O., are about to begin the manufacture of a novel scale for which they hold patents. Instead of weighing in pounds and ounces it indicates the value of articles weighed. For example, if a man buys butter at 30 cents a pound, an indicator is placed at thirty. This so adjusts the scale that the lower indicator shows the value of any weight of butter at that price that is put on the scales. The machines on this principle will be manufactured to weigh up to tons. The patentees will probably be located at Toledo.

BARRELS are now being made of hard and soft wood, each alternate stave being of the soft variety and slightly thicker than the hardwood stave. The edges of the staves are cut square, and when placed together to form the barrel the outsides are even, and there is a V-shaped crack between each stave from top to bottom. In this arrangement the operation of driving the hoops forces the edges of the hard staves into the soft ones until the cracks are closed, and the extra thickness of the latter causes the inner edges to lap over those of the hardwood staves, thus making the joint doubly secure.

AT a discussion of the Bedford (N. Y.) Farmers' Club, J. C. Hoy declared that on the farm to-day poultry is king—not cotton or corn, as we used to hear. Take the official report for 1883 as an example. The wheat product of that year was worth $488,000,000; the cotton product, $310,000,000; the dairy product, $254,000,000. But the poultry product was worth $360,000,000, half again as large as the cotton product, and larger than both the iron and steel products together. In 1870 the egg crop was worth $32,000,000. In the year named we imported 15,000,000 dozen of eggs, worth $2,677,000. Think of Germany sending us over 2,000,000 dozen and China over 1,000,000.

CHARLES BOOGHER is the name of a well-known character in the Bradford (Penn.) gas and oil regions. He has succeeded for some time that he could tell where natural gas could be got by boring simply by walking over the district. He says that its presence below the surface affects him with a strange tickling in the throat and choking sensation. Finding no one to put any faith in his claim in Pennsylvania he recently went over to the Ohio gas field, where he succeeded in getting assistance. Since then he has discovered a wonderful gas spot at Delphos, in that State, a well sank into which it said to be giving out some five million feet of gas per day.

I have the best facilities for furnishing

Caskets and Burial Cases

Together with all Trimmings. I will attend to every part of the business in a satisfactory manner. All orders for Funerals will be attended to promptly, and the friends of the dead will be relieved of all care in arrangements. I shall keep a good stock of coffins, etc. always on hand.

Livery Department

First-class Single and Double Rigs.

I have recently purchased for my Undertaking Business at considerable expense of Taylor's improved Ice Caskets for preserving the dead. This method keeps the ice from direct contact with the remains and does away with the old way of embalming, poisoning and mutilating the body. F. C. BEATTIE, Birmingham, Mich.
