

THE BIRMINGHAM ECCENTRIC.

WITTENBACH & MITCHELL.
Entered at the postoffice at Birmingham, Mich., as second class matter.

The next state that will be added to the union will doubtless be Dakota. It is known that the people of that state will be one or two.

The majority of the inhabitants seem to want the territory divided into two states. She is also worrying a good deal about what her name shall be. A change of name is always an important matter to giddy young things whether they are territories or girls. It has been suggested that Wyoming should be named after the southern half and Dakota retained for the northern half.

However, the people don't seem to take kindly to it. The name which Dakota has long been synonymous with, so that they want a name that will not have that meaning. How would North Dakota and South Dakota do? Or, if they object to being named after the Canadian, how about the night suggested.

It is doubtful whether the present session of congress will afford much relief to settlers upon public lands so any measures for the relief of the railroad which have failed to carry out the terms of their contracts. The senate committee on public lands has now before it a number of important bills affecting the rights of settlers by railroad syndicates and, other corporations.

Relief should be extended to settlers being unjustly treated, but even if the senate should act favorably upon the recommendations of the senate committee, congress will have adjourned before the house will be able to pass the necessary legislation.

Lieutenant Nathaniel Lyon of Maine, thinks he has discovered the origin of water spots, tornadoes and whirlwinds. They are caused, he says, by volcanic action. While this is a very interesting theory, the northern part of British America became positive of the source of these aerial disturbances; that they are generated by vacuum caused by the vacuum of the vacuum, being let down in the air by the revolutions of the earth, forms the vortex of a swiftly revolving tornado or water spot, and is carried by the prevailing winds to wherever the atmospheric equilibrium is restored and the force is spent.

The beef producers and butchers national association, with headquarters at Dallas, Texas, has set on foot a plan to reorganize the country's cattle markets by the enactment of laws to secure by legislation local inspection of cattle on the hoof for all towns and cities. Ostensibly the purpose of the association is to place the business of cattle-raising and slaughtering on a basis so as to secure the consumer cheaper and wholesome beef. In reality, however, the efforts of the association are directed to the methods of beef slaughter by local butchers which is now supplied by the large beef-packing industries of the country.

The rapid rate of increase in the immigration to this country, which nearly three years kept up, has been checked. The returns for the first of the current year, will show an increase of about twelve and a half per cent. This is the first time in the number of arrivals as compared with the corresponding months of the past few years that there has been perceptible decline. It is highly probable that the influx for the early months of 1900 will show a further falling in comparison with the corresponding months of this and last year.

A year ago three young ladies of Rapid City, Dakota, met at dinner and vowed never to marry, agreeing at the same time to die together. Each year on the anniversary of the day each year on the anniversary of the day they would meet and dine together. On the 23rd of last month they met, according to the agreement, but strange as may seem, each had a companion who would be ready to marry. They would be ready to marry. They would be ready to marry.

It was in one in which good cheer reigns. There is plenty of money in the New York City banks. Over four hundred millions are on deposit, which is an excess of forty millions as compared with last year. Nevertheless the banks have extended their loans thirty-three per cent as an increase with a corresponding increase in their volume of business.
