It may interest some of our readers to know that more than one supposed authority declares that the leaves of the tomato are more medicinal value than the fruit.

It is estimated that 3 million people were missed by the enumerations in the last census, but in all that number it is believed there is not a single person from Omaha or Chicago.

The queen has come out as a reformer, the object of her reformatory work being the British aristocracy. If she succeeds in reforming that reeking mass of moral degradation, she will be one of the greatest reformers known in history.

The price of a good-looking female slave in the United States of Columbia is $100. They are usually excellent cooks and many of them are expert in diving to the bottom of the streams in the gold districts and bringing up a gourd full of gold-bearing sand.

Every level headed man knows that the political interests of the country should be managed by those whose principles as stated by their platform, have brought them to power for there is the responsibility and loss or gain as they succeed or fail in the application of the principles they have advocated.

It seems as if there were enough languages already in this babel of a world without inventing any more. But something must be done to check the growth of the English language as a commercial tongue, and some continental European has invented "Volapuk." Lovers of the English tongue had better let Volapuk alone.

The public business must be conducted by someone. It cannot run itself, and if no one is responsible for its transaction, then if it is liable to go undone, or what is worse, half done. But we do not find that there is any backwardness in patriotic individuals stepping forward and offering themselves and their service at this public.

America has more extensive coal deposits than all of the other nations of the world put together, yet its annual output is less than half of that of Britain. A dozen rich men control the American mines and they meet once or twice a year to limit production and to "adjust" prices. These men have it in their power to levy a tax upon the American people whenever they feel like it.

Some barbers never learn anything. It has been shown that the barber-shop sponge is one of the best things in the world for carrying infection. The use of them is a filthy practice. No intelligent barber will use one, and no man with any respect for his face or his health will allow such a thing to be on his face. It is impossible to keep sponges clean in a barber shop of any where else unless they are boiled and disinfected every time they are used.

It is worthy of note that a man who is at home seems incapable of satisfying her subjects, the moment she goes abroad she shows a marvelous aptitude for assimilating those people with whom she comes in contact. In Eastern Turkestan, where the Chinese rule, a deep sympathy and respect have grown up for the Russian name, and the people have begun to long for the arrival of the Russians as liberators.

"All run down at the heel" tells a pitiful story generally; it calls to mind a person who has had money, friends and position—one who has seen these disappear—and with the loss of the three, has also been forsaken by pride and ambition. And in the shiftless sinking trough life the feet that was formerly trained to walk on the square has learned to topple to one side until ambition, brain and heel are all about at the same angle. A throb of pity goes out to this one "run down at the heel."

During the past ten years physical training has come more and more to the front. More and more of our colleges are recoguling this, and are establishing courses of physical instruction. It is no longer true that the student may be known by his atrophied muscles and haggard face. The man of brain may be a man of muscle, and all the better for his muscle, for his clear sight, vitality and elasticity of developed chest. Brain and brawn may go hand in hand, and each will last longer for the union.

If there is a misapplied term on earth it is that of frankness and honesty of speech. The person who, under the name of outspoken candor, comments upon the unbecomingness of your dress, or the misfit of your gown, or any other personal matter, is nothing better than a boor. Honesty need not take the shape of a club nor frankness the form of a buzzing, inquisitive bee to prove itself the genuine article. There is an intimacy so close as to admit of impertinence to wounding personalities, and there is no nature so open and outspoken as to admit of the perpetration of rudeness and the gross violation of courtesy in its dealings with either friend or foe.

How many people stop to consider the wonders that have been worked in our own time? It was our own fathers and mothers that traveled in stage coaches, or on the boats of the Erie Canal; that found postage an item of expense to be considered, and never heard of communication by steam or electricity, yet how careless we are of all these things! We are angry if the telephone does not work just as it should, thrtiated if a train is ten minutes late and think it an outrage if we do not receive the telegraphic message sent from New York at 10:55 within half an hour of the time when it was filed. So does familiarity breed contempt, and we do not feel even surprised when we learn that a telegraph operator in one of the newspaper offices of Boston, desiring to communicate with his chief, two blocks away, and finding some delay in securing a response to his call, sent his message by way of New York and thus talked over five hundred miles of line, to send a message a distance of scarcely more than as many feet.

IN MICHIGAN.

A HUNTER SHOT BY MISTAKE AT WOLF CREEK.

A Dishonest Cashier Makes a Confession.

Matters From All Parts of the State Briefly Told.

Hinckney's Confession.

Grand Rapids, Oct. 7.—Nathan S. Hinckney, the absconding cashier of the Lake Shore local freight office, is now behind the bars of the county jail, after a 16 months' career almost as eventful as that of Clarence Toot. He was visited to-day by many of his old friends and associates, and to all he gave a hearty greeting. He said: "I fled because I had to. Some men are apt to handle money, and I wish I had never taken the position of cashier. The jingle of money sounded sweet in my ears, and I went beyond my means. I spent money freely, and a shortage developed in my accounts. When they checked me up books was $500 short, but I had it fixed so that they didn't discover it. Then my accounts ran up $900 short, and that is where I had to fix it possible to evade detection much longer. I took $6,000 and fled. I was getting $55 a month and could not save much on that amount. I went to Mexico, England, Scotland and Europe, and finally returned to St. Louis. My intention was to give back the money somewhere, but I could not speak any foreign language and the wages were so low that I came back to America. I had been meeting Clarence Toot all the time I knew while working for the big four in St. Louis, and the fear of being recognized was a great one. I was in constant misery. I finally decided to go and give myself up, which I did. I will plead guilty and take the consequences."

Killed While Hunting.

Alpena, Oct. 7.—Nelson Ross was killed in the woods at Wolf Creek, this county, on Monday and a companion were out hunting. Ross shot at a bird, and he and his companion entered a thicket to see what they had killed. The bird. While there Henry McBride and a comrade came along the log road. They discovered deer tracks, and McBride, being a light colored object moving about the thicket, raised his 45-caliber Winchester and fired at it. He missed, what he had aimed at and fired again. He was then horrified to hear a man yell out: "I'm shot." On going to the place McBride discovered he had killed a man named Nelson Ross. The ball entered the body just above the hip, struck bone, glanced off the body and caused almost instantaneous death. The three men picked up the dead body and brought it to Alpena City as soon as they could. An inquest was held, which brought out the above facts.

Turner's Denial.

Lansing, Oct. 7.—Hon. James M. Turner's denial of the charges made by F. M. Kellogg and Hon. Thomas W. Ryan, Russell Harper, and three copies were sent by a trusty messenger to Detroit, Monday. Mr. Turner refused to show the letter, and would only say anything as to what the papers contained. The denial is, however, said to be explicit.

Considerable excitement was stirred up and the whole matter finally settled by the association people giving out the name of each man's franchise. The bells of Big Rapids were rung loudly and long Wednesday in glory of the victory.

IT'S OVER.

THE FIFTY-FIRST CONGRESS STANDS ADJOURNED.

The Tariff Bill Is Now the Law of the Land.

Some of the Final Scenes at the Close of the Term.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2, 1890.

On Wednesday the chaplain invoked divine blessing upon the members of the house who were about to depart for their respective homes. Before the journal of Tuesday's proceedings of the house was read, Representative Breckenridge, of Kentucky, raised the point of order that there was no quorum present. A call of the house was ordered, and while waiting for a quorum a message was received from the senate, announcing the agreement to the conference report on the tariff bill.

In the 10 months of the session that closed yesterday President Harrison sent to the senate 2,837 nominations, of which all but 12 were confirmed. As many of these nominations contained the name of more than one person, they represented probably 4,500 appointments. Of the several hundred of these were postmasters at offices which have become presidential through the increase of salaries. They also include the appointments in connection with the census, nearly all of which are temporary in their nature.

Mr. Spooner, of Rhode Island, from the committee on accounts, submitted the report of that committee on the subject. The report declares that charges made by the Enloe resolution against the postmaster of the House have been substantially established, and that although the relations between Dalton (the previous postmaster) and Culbertson (the present incumbent) are not clear, the suspicion that some private arrangement existed between them, whereby Dalton, during the forty-ninth and fiftieth Congresses, derived pecuniary benefit from the contracts for carrying the mails, no absolute proof had been obtained. The report is accompanied by a resolution declaring the office of postmaster of the House vacant, and directing the assistant postmaster to perform the duties of postmaster until a postmaster shall have been elected and duly qualified.

The resolution was agreed to.

Speaker Reed signed the tariff bill at 2:45 p. m.

Mr. McKinley, of Ohio, chairman of the committee appointed to wait upon the president, announced that the president had no further communication to make and then the house took a recess.

During the recess nearly all the members left the hall to make preparations for their departure from the city, and when the speaker reconvened the house that official was called upon upon a vast array of empty seats. He merely stated that according to the concurrent resolution he declared the first session of the fifty-first congress adjourned without day.

In the senate Mr. Sherman offered a resolution for the appointment of a committee of two senators to join a like committee of the house to wait upon the president and inform him that unless he shall have any further communication to make the two houses are now ready to adjourn. The resolution was agreed to. Messrs. Sherman and Harris were appointed the committee on the part of the senate.

At 2:50 the tariff bill was presented to the senate by the clerk of the house, Mr. McPherson. Two minutes later Vice-President Morton affixed his signature to it. The signature was announced through Chief Clerk Gallinger.

The announcement was followed by the recognition of Mr. Aldrich, who reported from the conference committee the conference providing for the adjournment of congress amended so as to make the time of final adjournment 4 o'clock. The resolution was agreed to.

The president signed the tariff bill and it became a law at 3 o'clock Thursday.

Mr. Caswell of Wisconsin submitted a letter addressed to the speaker by James Wheat, postmaster of the House, tendering his resignation.

Are They Honest.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 7.—At the general conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints yesterday the official declaration of President Wilford Woodruff forbidding in the future any marriages in violation of the laws of the land was read, and the congregation numbering nearly 10,000 persons, including the apostles, bishops, and leading officials of the church, by unanimous vote recognized the authority of the president to issue the manifesto and accepted the same as binding upon them.

George Q. Cannon publicly announced his endorsement of the manifesto and his recognition of the authority of the church, and his statement was received with applause.

The action taken settles the vexed question and places an effectual bar against the practice of marriages in Utah, which is the most important step taken by the church for more than a quarter of a century.

Keusch Acquitted.

Amanoer Keusch was arraigned in the Recorder's court in Detroit Wednesday morning and pleaded not guilty to the charge of manslaughter for shooting his stepfather, Dr. F. S. Utter, on the 5th ult., from the effects of which he died on the 12th ult. The young man was in a hurry to have the trial come off and the prosecutor was also anxious to have the case brought out of the way, so it was decided to go on with the trial at once—something that is very seldom done. After the evidence was all in Mr. Lillie and Judge Chambers said he did not wish to take the responsibility of directing a verdict and submitted the case to the jury, telling them to retire and find their verdict. Juror Thomas Henderson rose and said that they did not need to retire and their verdict of not guilty was pronounced instanter. Young Keusch was therefore discharged and shook hands with the jurors, but not with his mother, nor was there any embracing or kissing or other demonstration of joy or affection. The Windsor quartette sang a congratulatory anthem and seemed very much elated at the result. Dr. Utter was shot September 5, died September 12, and was buried Sunday. Thus it will be seen that very fast time has been made from start to finish.

A Bold Robbery.

A bold express robbery was committed on a Cincinnati, Sandusky & Cleveland train south of Tiffin, O., Thursday morning. Immediately after the train left Fostoria two masked men with cocked revolvers, entered the express car and compelled the messenger to throw up his hands. They then tied him securely, robbed the safe of packages containing several thousand dollars and other valuables. While they were at work a brakeman attempted to enter the car and was shot at by one robber. He gave the alarm, and the train was stopped. The robbers broke open the door to capture the robbers but they jumped from the train just as it was entering West Liberty and escaped. The robbery occurred about 5 o'clock. Scudder, the messenger, was bound in his chair with a washing line. The robbers brought with them a box, in which they put the valuables. One of them, whom the other called "Jack," tried to kill Scudder before leaving the car, using his revolver as a club, but missing the trigger, but the cartridge failed to explode. The other robber then prevented him from killing again. When the train pulled out of West Liberty the two scoundrels again got aboard holding the entire crew at bay. Scudder, who had been released, was forced to open the door and from his car floor, but was compelled to retreat. The robbers kept on board until the Lake Shore junction was reached, when they jumped off and disappeared. The officers at Bellefontaine are searching for them. Scudder is about 50 years old, lives in Cincinnati and has been on his run since the Atlanta express company took charge of the express business on it, about three years ago. He was previously in the same company's employ on the Ohio river lines. He had just received his month's salary and that was among the property.

Two of the robbers were captured at Bellefontaine Friday morning by the railroad detectives, and one of them has made a confession. The third robber implicated in the job is still at large with $600 of the booty in his possession.

Birchall Weakens.

Woodstock, Ont., Oct. 7.—Birchall is constantly talking about the case. He is excitement, and says he is sure that they will make a clean breast of the crime. He has already acknowledged that he was implicated in the murder, but says that he is well to Eastwood and beyond in the disposition of the Beecham swamp, where the body was discovered, but still denies that he was by his hand that Beswell was killed.

Oklahoma is still "hully!" Eighteen months' growth, netting a population of nearly 100,000, has not yet subjected it to bank robbery, shows the heartiness of youth in the van of modern progress.
