The Chinese are not like the white people they do not permit their faces to be photographed. But they were like other men they would not for a permit, nor would they submit to a mandatory "Don't."

Those people who never seem to meet about the government's treatment of Poor Joe have never seen him as he was in his good behavior. The most enthusiastic advocates of the Quaker Indian policy belong to a class that know nothing of Indian life save what they have gleaned from reading sensational novels or from listening to the jiggle of Hivahs.

WILLIAM McPHERSON, Birmingham, Ala., who has long been the leading name in this city, died Saturday morning at his residence, 1515 1/2 St. Placerville, at the age of 78.

WILLIAM WANTS Europe displaced, example, however, would be more likely to persuade the British than on half a million men to dig barbed wire and fortresses and to quibble regarding instead of drinking and doing nothing at the end of the industrial overcast.

THE people of the western states probably are as much as save as the "sons of the eastern state," but they do not put up with the same in bank, partly because there are comparatively few savings banks in the west, and partly because working people have less confidence in such institutions, but mainly because the opportunities for making money are more numerous in the west.

THE success of a successful photographer, said one who knows, "is in making pictures that fatter the subject. No person wishes to have a picture which accurately represents him as he appears to other people on the street. Each man or woman has a sentimental impression of his or her appearance which is different from the appearance which he or she really is, and which he or she desires to have in his photograph.

CHENABER are scarce in California now, owing to the fact that there is the loss of the laborer who have gone to the lake severely fed, as other people are getting into the state. A San Francisco says: "There is a strong sentiment on the coast, and it is gaining in strength, that will demand the repeal of the Chinese law in the near future. OLD man Herodotus is getting a good deal of credit because Stanley, in his narrations confirmed his story regarding the African continent, it is possible that the Egyptian priest from whom the Greek historian obtained the most of his information did have some positive knowledge of a diminutive race living in the greatest part of the continent. Some of the merchants of the Nile valley, especially, traveled long distances in pursuit of gain and brought back the most wonderful stories of the peoples they had visited. Mr. Stanley must read up his Herodotus, make another trip, and find the people who have left their heads and "carry them under their arms."

A MAN who wishes to get by a barbed-wire fence must have an eye that looks with entire accuracy from a very good head, commanding ability in the way of handling his property. A better part of an afternoon in which to study and accomplish his job. Observe all he gets across all, he finds himself seriously spoiled. A barbed-wire fence climber has not to his undeveloped powers, to appear like a fugitive in the night with the humble conviction that if a single wire has been touched he will be arrested with this enemy, the result may be terrible all along the line. It takes a very clever man, with an extraordinary eye, to make a barbed-wire fence opposite side of a barbed wire fence.

FARMERS in the south and west wonder how so many of their brethren on the rocky New England farms can live in contentment while at the same time living "well" and enjoying the privileges of good society, schools and churches. The great secret of it is that each farmer produces on his own farm nearly all the things that they will sell at largely profit. The many western and southern farmers, on the contrary, grow grain, stock and cotton, and buy all their supplies. Now, without materially diminishing the production of both grain and cotton, they could grow nearly all their own provisions and stock. The farmers would then have more money to spend for their grain and cotton to pay for their farm, make improvements or to buy against a rainy day. The farmers who have learned this lesson from experience.
