MATTERS OF INTEREST.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

Whitehead & Mitchell
Birmingham, Mich.

The life of firemen in a city is had enough without to say rude and the danger is greatly increased by their inability to come in contact with live electric wires at every extensive fire. And it does seem that there has been talk enough about it for something to be done about it.

One of the most curious features of character reading is the degree to which personal feelings are allowed to warp the judgment. "I judge people as I find them," is a common expression; and it usually means that the speaker bases ninety-five per cent of his estimate of a man on the personal treatment he has received from him, and five per cent on the treatment the rest of the world has received.

A wise man gets happiness from what he is rather than from what he has. What he is remains; what he has who will insure that? Plutarch says that Alexander caused to be painted on a table a sword within the compass of a wheel, to show that what he had gotten by the sword was wheeled about by fate or fortune. Therefore with all your gettings get wisdom. Seek to be rather than to have. Therein lies happiness.

Is it not a fact that all the cures for morbid worry, bilious irritability and wayward gloominess are founded on the neglected lighter and brighter side of life? It is only stupid bovine sullenness that can resist sunny smiles for long. Well-regulated mirthfulness, dealt out as it is able to be borne, will find a way in time to the heart of any man unless he is an unspoiled lout. Once get the cross-grained old curmudgeon of a fellow to accept a heartiness to laugh, and his merriment will carry off the sulkiness of his temper as a lightning-conductor empties a storm-cloud of its danger.

Much of the blame of broken confidences rests upon the one who has given them. He has been too anxious for sympathy or comfort or approval to consider the possible cost to himself or to the other. He feels that he has given a sacred trust when, in fact, he has required a great and perhaps impossible favor. He has no right to demand so high a task or to inflict so heavy a burden on his friend much less to reproach him with disloyalty if he faints under the weight. He should at least make sure not only of his kind intentions but of his power to do what he desires without undue strain.

There is a certain indefinite percentage of convicts who wish to reform. Of these there is a much smaller percentage who can and do overcome all difficulties and reform with no other help than that of their own experience of the suffering from persistence in evil courses. There are others, and these are perhaps the majority of all, who wish to reform and who will do if they are favored by circumstances. Finding circumstances against them, they say, There is still another class, and by no means a small one, in whom the wish to reform is entertained, but is not persistent even under favorable circumstances.

What does persist in one class of convicts who wish to reform is the self-indulgence and lack of self-control that sent them to prison originally. They are no worse perhaps on their release than many who will never so violate the criminal code as to be imprisoned, but their self-indulgence will lead them to repeat their acts of lawlessness. Of course there are also very small class who commit crime for crime's sake. These only are the really "hardened criminals." They are in the last stages of moral idiocy, and the only thing that can be done for them is to lock them up where they can do the least harm to themselves and others.

Of all the necessaries that a community consumes in its ordinary life, perhaps the major portion of its demand, because this is constant and daily received, is under the control of its women. In their hands are the economies of the household. Few men ever ask or know what particular variety of products is consumed in the kitchen. She who graces the home and rules its details with so fine a hand is arbiter there. Yet in most households the greater part of the family income must be devoted to these necessaries, and the question whether supplies are home or other manufacture becomes a vital one. In the kitchen lie the sources of demand whose supply, in great part, will effect the question of helping our home industries. Let our women understand thoroughly the purpose had in view, set them become partners in our feeling and our purpose, and from the domain of local supplies alone we may keep to ourselves a traffic worth thousands.

It is a phenomenon in the history of crime that the medical profession should furnish so large a proportion of criminals. Every year a considerable number pass under state supervision for punishment, and in most cases it is observed that they have either become victims to habits their destitute training should have guarded them against, or that they had failed to make a living by the practice of medicine and were driven to crime by want. The latter fact indicates that the profession is so seriously overcrowded that measures ought to be taken to make admission to it more difficult. Now anybody with money enough to pay the usual fees is admitted can get into any of scores of so-called medical colleges and, after attended study for six months of each two or three years, come forth with a diploma. A diploma, however, does not secure practice. Doctors are constantly dropping out of the profession on account of failure to make a living at it. They are glad to take up other occupations in which success is more certain.

Supreme Court Decisions on the Dickinson County Tax Case and the Seating of Fridlender.

Murder by Robbers at Bay City.—Elk Rapids Has a Hailroad.—Rich Farmer Killed With a Club.

The Doings and Happening in Our Two Peninsulas Which are of Much Importance.

Supreme Court Decision.

Dickinson county is all right. So says the supreme court in a decision filed Tuesday. State senators Morrow and Fridlender were legally entitled to the seats of Senators Morse and Horton, the sitting body a majority of the supreme court of Michigan, were legally unseated. Regarding the mandamus asked for by the auditor-general to compel the board of supervisors of Menominee county to levy the state tax apportioned to that county that that county territory set apart to Dickinson county by the act creating the latter county, which had not gone into effect, the writ of detainment was made, the court ordered a reapportionment as far as these counties were concerned. The opinion is by the majority on the seating of Fridlepder and Morse says the legislature was a judicial body while deciding upon the qualifications of its members, and that the court had no constitutional powers to review the action. The opinion is written by Justice McGrath, and concurred in by Justices Champlain and Morse.

The dissenting opinion by Justices Long and Grant also is quite lengthy and quite exhaustively, and holds that the effect of the protest filed on the morning of February 17 by 17 senators, and the fact, rescinding of the action of the day before. The majority of the members had the power to do it, and that the action of the president and secretary of the senate, in refusing to spread upon the journal the fact of rescission, is beyond the legislative control and that Fridlender was a stranger in that body.

Terrible Murder in Bay City.

Bay City has another awful murder to add to its long list. Joseph Lomnia was found in his house by his wife on his returned from a shopping tour. Lomnia lay on the kitchen floor in a pool of blood and his head crushed in. The skull had been found the little daughter on a bed in an unconscious condition and blood flowing from a painfully wound in her face. Another child had heard the noise of the struggle and hidden. The house bore evidences of a fearful struggle. The fact that Lomnia was known to have a large sum of money in the house with which he intended buying a farm must have been known to the murderer, who also must have been acquainted with the house, as bureau drawer in which $80 had been secured was pried open and no other furniture injured. No clue.

Elk Rapids' Joy is Full.

The branch of the Chicago & Wes Michigan railroad from Traverse City to Petoskey, is now ready for business between Elk Rapids and Traverse City by way of Williamsburg, and regular trains have begun running. They make close connections with trains for Grand Rapids, Detroit and Chicago and for the first time Elk Rapids citizens feel they are fairly on the map of progress. The formal opening of the line was held and prominent officials of the Chicago & West Michigan left Detroit, Lansing & Northern were present. Capt. William A. Gaver represented the Detroit suit of the system at the jubilee.

"Indeterminate" Prisoners Can Go.

Judge Sherman B. Dabell, of the Circuit and Corporation court of Wayne, in the case of John Wilson against Warden Davis, brought by habeas corpus proceedings to wash out a writ of error to be obtained in prison has been filed here with the county clerk. It orders the release of the prisoner, but will not be effective if ordered stayed until January 6, that the attorney general may bring the case before the supreme court. About 20 prisoners are serving sentence imposed under the indeterminate law and are affected by the decision.

Murdered by His Teamster.

A terrible murder has occurred in the little town of Sagola, about 20 miles north of Iron Mountain, on the Menominee & Northern railroad. Patrick Carey, a farmer of considerable wealth, had some trouble with Frank Stein, who was his teamsters, and in a tussel which ensued Stein struck Carey on the head with a stake. The blow fractured Carey's skull and he died shortly afterwards. Stein escaped and has not been apprehended. A man named Hannigan is under arrest in connance at Crystal Falls, the county seat of Iron.

Aged Lady's Narrow Escape.

Miss Gibbs, of Hillsdale, a maiden lady of 85 years, had a miraculous escape from death. She tried to run across the track at the Oak street cross ng ahead of a train and was struck by the engine and thrown into the air. She alighted on the pilot, where she held to a brace until the train ran about a block. When it was stopped she stepped down and walked away uninjured save a few slight bruises.

The robber jumped from the stage and waited for the mail carrier, held him up, secured the mail bags and escaped. Some of the letters were found in a field the next morning.

Dynamite Explosion at Dublin Castle.

A cable from Dublin says: A dynamite sensation was caused in this city by a rumor that the "physical force" party had countenance, operations and that their first attempt had been made against Dublin castle, the official residence of the earl of Zetland, viceroy of Ireland. The rumor was found to be based on fact. It appeared that a number of workmen have been employed in making alterations lately in and about the castle. One of the gangs of which was being overlooked was the office directly under the room in which the privy council holds its meetings. The workmen were being hurried in their labors so that all the changes proposed might be completed by the time the meeting of the "castle season," which begins on February 2, with the holding of the first levee. While the workmen were at their meals a tremendous explosion took place and severely shook the castle, completely wrecking the office and the rooms directly above the place of the explosion. Very fortunately one was injured. The affair created consternation among the people living in and employed about the castle. All the dynamite outrages that have been perpetrated in London and other places in Great Britian are called to mind, and a large number of people have the opinion that the "physical force" party have again put their policy of terrorism into effect. The crown's best detectives are at work on the matter.

A Novel Passion Play.

During the first week in June next an extraordinary gathering of Canadian Indians will take place at Kamloops in British Columbia. There will be present about 7,000 Christian Indians, from various parts of the province, Manitoba and probably a number of pagan Indians. Rev. Fr. Lacombe has organized this unique gathering and during the meeting the "Passion Play" will be presented by Christian Indians. This performance is not, of course, the principal object of the gathering; there is understood to be a desire to meet one another, compare notes and consider adaptation of methods and the progress in the arts of civilization.

"Peck-a-Boo" Has Paresis.

William J. Scanlan, the star actor of "Mavourneen," will not act again this season. It is a matter of doubt if he will ever again appear as the stage. After a long and pain effort on the part of his managers, Scanlan's physician, a physician to control him, it is now confessed that his mind is affected; in short, that he is a sufferer from paresis, the disease that has sent to an asylum and to the grave Tony Hart, John McCullough, Bartley Campbell, Charles Bingham and other theatrical people of note.

New York's New Governor.

He who has so long been known as Gov. Hill is now only plain Dave Hill with the title of "senator" awaiting his pleasure. Roswell P. Flower has been inaugurated as the chief executive of the empire state. The inaugural ceremonies were held in the assembly chamber at Albany which was gorgeously decorated with American flags, bunting and potted plants. The chamber and the galleries were filled to overflowing. Mr. Flower and party went to the executive chamber where they met Gov. Hill and staff, who formally turned over the power. The party then proceeded to the assembly chamber. Gov. Hill in a brief address congratulated the incoming officer to Mr. Flower. Mr. Flower responded in a brief and appropriate speech in which he made no promises, but asked that he be judged by his future rather than his past. Secretary of State Rice then stepped forward and administered the oath of office to the new governor. Gov. Flower then said: The inaugural party then returned to the executive chamber, where a public reception was held.

Chicago's Fire Mayor Dead.

Roswell B. Mason, who was mayor of Chicago during the great conflagration, died, aged 86 years. Mr. Mason was born in New Hartford, N. Y., in 1805. In early life he worked as a surveyor on the Erie & Schuylkill canals. He afterwards was connected with the construction of the Rensselaer & Saratoga, the New York & Erie, Haven and the Vermont valley railways. In 1851 he went to Illinois to superintend the construction of the Illinois Central and remained there ever since, having been connected with the construction of several railways and the improvement of the Illinois & Michigan canal. Mayor Mason's services at the time of the great fire are well known. As individual some of the attempts to stop the conflagration, and under certain conditions were blown up with powder. Finding it useless to turning loose the engines in the path of the flames, he and his sons escaped from the flames after a perilous journey through the blazing streets.

Shortest Message on Record.

Ohio politics have been an interesting theme for some time past and now attention is directed to the fact that the chief executive who has won the credit for sending the shortest message on record, the message being delivered to the general assembly. The constitution compels the governor to communicate annually his views to the general assembly. As the election will take place in November, it is discharged upon one week from today by the incoming governor, the present incumbent confining himself to a general note suggestions and recommendations made by him to the sixty-ninth general assembly. Especial attention is called to the benevolent, penal and reformatory and educational institutions of the state and to the sanitary exhibit made by the various public boards. The general annual report.—James Campbell, Governor.

To Revolutionize Flour Making.

A revolution in manufacturing will be given to the flour trade, if the plans of one one of the largest flour mills in the northwest will be operated by electricity. It is claimed that this move will be a great an improvement in flour making as was the introduction of the gradual-reduction system 20 years ago. As was the case then, the improvement will be first made out by fire. The great Minneapolis mill explosion which practically wiped out the milling business of that city for more than a year. Hungarian roller or gradual-reduction process taking the place of the old mill stone process. About a year ago the Pillsbury roller mill was destroyed by fire and rebuilt on a larger scale. It will now be operated by electricity. The electric power is to be furnished by the Edison company from all over the country have been engaged upon the work for more than a year and a half. Electrical experts from all over the country have been employed and the work has been pushed until the last perfected it. The owners claim that they will revolutionize flour making and reduce the cost one-third.

Four Deaths in a Collision.

By a mistake in train orders at a sastrous collision occurred on the Chicago & Atlantic railroad, seven miles east of Chillicothe, Mo., resulting in the death of four of the train men and the fatal wounding of two others. The dead are: Engineer Bisbee of engine 6, Fireman Lewis of engine 6, Baggage man Price, of engine 46, Brakeman Gilmore. Brakeman Bell was taken from beneath a pile of debris with his back injured that he cannot live, while Brakeman Hannon, of engine 46, has received in jured that will result in his death. Eleven cars of cattle were wrecked. The wreck took fire and the poor animals were slowly roasted to death.

"Public Opinion is Anarchy."

In the Camden, N. J., court Alfred A. Holl, editor of the Camden Echo, was sentenced by Judge Hugg to pay a fine of $1,000 and to be committed to the county jail until a further order from the court. Editor Holl was aggrieved by the remarks in an article which he published, and when Judge Hugg was passing sentence said that any person who spoke or wrote contemptuously of the court should be severely punished. Judge Hugg said that public opinion was a farce, but he was aware that while he was on the bench he proposed to punish those who were insolent or who uttered or published statements bringing either himself or his court into contempt.

Milliqn and a Half Fire.

The great barrel works of the Standard Oil company at Cleveland, O., have been burned and property valued at $1,500,000 was destroyed by flames. Nothing but the bare house could be saved and the efforts of the men fighting the flames were directed solely to that end. The building was over 400 feet long and three stories high and the enclosed contained property valued at $1,500,000, nearly all of which was destroyed. Gen. Supt. Alexander, who was present, declined to estimate the loss. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

80 Drowned by a Tidal Wave.

Reports from the Gilbert islands, in the Pacific, say that a tidal wave, the result of submarine disturbances, tidal waves drove high over some of the islands of the group, causing great loss of life. On one island alone 80 natives perished. The exact extent of the tidal waves is not known, but it is supposed that several other islands have escaped devastation and further information is anxiously looked for.

THE FIRE FIEND.

Several Lives Lost—Female Seminary Destroyed—Other Damage.

A small fire in an all-night restaurant under the Waverly hotel on Clarke street, Chicago, resulted in two deaths by suffocation, one person being fatally injured and four others badly hurt. The fire although small and kept confined to the restaurant, was very exciting, all the inmates making a rush for the street as they witnessed. The clerk, after strenuous efforts, succeeded in rousing all the guests, the last one to be awakened being a woman who had taken refuge in their rooms. Several were carried out of the room by firemen and the police were filled to overflowing. Mr. Flower and party went to the executive chamber where they met Gov. EARTHQUAKES IN JAPAN.

Mr Edwin Arnold Says the Little Ones Are Not Heeded.

The usual scene of seismic disturbances in Japan is in and around Tokio and islands near the capital are pointed out as their foci, said Sir Edwin Arnold. Near there is also the great volcano of Fugisan. Thirty years ago 20,000 persons are said to have perished by earthquake and flood, but the latter loss is evidently greater. Osaka and Nagoya are busy, populous cities.

Nagoya is about two hundred and fifty miles from Tokio and on the route to Kioto. A rail road runs between it and Tokio. The country abounds in hills, many of them volcanic, and no doubt fires, underlie the ground. The great shock that last year did Japanese troops executed their military manoeuvers under the eye of the emperor. It is a large city of wide well-planned streets and has a population of 120,000. The principal occupation of its inhabitants has been the production of silk and cotton wove goods, and it is very famous for its porcelains. Osaka is a very rich and populous city, commanding city on the border of a river that leads to the sea. It was not so much damaged. Ichagine, as Nagoya.

The great shock of 1891 was likely due rather to fire than to any commotion. The houses are usually only one story high and are of thin wood. Even the shock of the earthquake easily shakes down these houses, and as everyone contains a firebox and a petroleum lamp, a general conflagration is the result. Light earthquakes are so common in Japan that they attract little notice. They begin with a little commotion, tines or thrice repeated, and then vibration increases and a roar follows. When you begin to wonder what is about to happen it ceases and all is quiet. To guard against the effects of frequent shakings the Japanese have invented an ingenious contrivance.

In my house at Azova the column of cherry which supports the roof was pivoted, not upon the ground, but upon a cup, so that the earthquake did not cause it to tumble down, but only made it oscillate. An earthquake proof house also has been invented, which is fastened to a strong massive petal which slips along the beams. Thus the danger of being struck down in the doorway is removed, but the danger arises chiefly from the conflagration of the ruins, as I have described. The consequent floods, too are very dolorous ones. The death is first by the shock and a huge wave, usually from the sea upon the city on its border."

IN RUSSIA.

Babies Are Never Washed as Such a Process Would Kill Them.

In the life of a Russian peasant there is a period anterior to all tunics, namely, that even sleepskins during which he lives in the primitive baby linen. The author of "A Journey Due North" speaks thus of the peasant babyhood: "The youngest children are always swaddled tightly, and tightly by bandages, so that they may be conveniently put away without risk of getting themselves into mischief or hurting themselves. Small babies, I know, and my first thought was that the Russian peasants had their idols and fetishes with their heads carved out in the most grotesque manner, the bodies being left in block. Suddenly one of these 'idols' was lying on a shelf another hung to the wall on a peg and a third swung over one of the beams in the cottage roof. I looked curiously, and saw the eyes turn and the head move. 'Why, that is a child!' I cried in astonishment. What else should it be?' was the answer. And I went up to the little figure which hung from the beam and inspected it more closely. On a nearer view, I was impressed by the close articulation of the little creature. I could not resist asking if the mother often washed these swaddling babies. 'Washed,' cried the peasant aghast! 'What—wash a baby? You would kill it!'"

The Russian Army.

The Russian standing army consists of 910,932 infantry, 84,926 cavalry, 67,215 artillery and 16,000 engineers, with 35,180 ordinance, a total of 619,178 enlisted men and 28 000 officers. The Cossack strength in the peace footing of the Cossacks in time of war, total, 19,448; there are 172,634 officers and men of the reserve and 100,000 officers and men of the local and auxiliary forces. Total, that is, of about 814,000 officers and men. The war footing of 2 220,798 combatants, officers and men.

GRUNDY'S BUDGET.

This is the estimate Bishop Clark, Rhode Island, makes of Bishop Brooks: "He will be an easy bishop to work under. He won't expect his clergy to work as he does, or to think as he does, or to preach as he does."

A son of the late Marshal Bazaine of France recently decided to adopt a new surname. Beaulair But the choice of that name, objecting to his use of it, have taken legal steps to prevent his carrying out the change.

Geo. E Kirby Smith leaves his university chair in the Tennessee mountains to winter and then with his old friends at Nashville. He is delighted with the appearance with gray hair and a long flowing wife beard.

Henry Watterson, Art Hooker, the banker, are among the most conspicuous Americans in Rome; the latter gentleman having taken the Imperial City about forty years. The American colony there numbers about 2,000.

Minna Irving has been visiting and preparing for the publication of some of Washington Irving at Tarrytown, where in a rambling old cottage the great author's nephew, Irving, still lives in quiet, which they refuse to allow curiosity seekers to disturb.

Thomas Nelson Page is known at the bar in Virginia as well as in the bookshops, and he is reputed to have a very large practice indeed. He also looks more like a Virginia gentleman of the old school than an author. He is of medium height, with blue eyes and sandy hair.

Mr. Lalouckov who is said to be attached to a foreign court he created several "counts" by simply issuing new patents in which he conferred the honors by that title. Occasionally he will meet a son of one of the counts, "and," he adds, "from the height of his nobility he looks down on me."

One odd experience in the life of Sir Edwin Arnold seems not yet to have been brought out in the newspapers of New York. To win a wager made with a lady he climbed 13,000 feet to the top of Fuji San. Since then he has been a knowledge of its crater a picturesque poem of ninety-two lines.

John Jacob Astor left an injunction in his will that the family should always maintain investments in Real Estate funds and in English securities that he had himself commenced. The sons and grandsons have obeyed the injunction religiously and the family has now "anchor to windward" as much as possible.
