The marriage of a New York couple in the head of the statue of Liberty will prompt some crusty old bachelor to remark that it is no new thing for young couples to go to work in the head.

The English compartment car abomination would not last in this country six weeks. American newspapers have a way of assailing outrages of this character that would soon put business for them in short order. Witness the car stove of a few years ago.

UPTON, a magnanimous patriotism displaces self-centered concentration America will never achieve that summit of her influence among the nations of the world for which she is pre-eminently fitted by the framework of her institutions and the benevolence of her natural endowments. Nothing but the vast selfishness of the country prevents the evil results of these conditions from becoming more disastrously evident. That this will continue to be the case for years to come is highly probable.

It is not so hard for the human spirit, full of emotion and stirred to extraordinary effort by sudden impulse on battle-field or in other scenes of brilliant spectacle or maddening excitement, to risk the loss of that which to every man is dearer than all else. It requires a serener courage, a heart more deliberate in self-sacrifice to risk life for others in a dismal river overflow, in rickety boat, with no skill against rushing waters, with little endurance in the chill of furious blizzards.

This country has no sympathy with what is called primogeniture and equally little with the custom of millionaires leaving the bulk of their fortunes to their sons and only pittances to their daughters. The object of such wills is to continue great fortunes and to make them still larger. An equal distribution among the children of millionaires would mean more rapid dissipation of accumulated fortunes. It would be more in keeping with the spirit of republican institutions, which are opposed to the creation of a permanent moneyed class.

The Australian war-ship Aurora passed up New York Bay recently. Opposite Governor's Island she fired the national salute of twenty-one guns, and the fort responded. Probably these national courtesies are desirable, if not necessary; and yet Sir Arthur Helps estimated that they cost more in time of peace than all the orphan asylums of the world. So did Disraeli once contend that the buttons worn on the back of men's coats where a waste of no small utility, and as much as the whole educational system of Great Britain.

Neglecting individuals here and there, when gathered together, would form a minority not altogether inconsiderable in its quantity and weighty in its intellectual quality, is surely indisputable that this disease of greed is a serious menace to the highest form of public progress. Culture in the arts, religion, morality, justice, citizenship, science, sociological questions and, in fact, all that tills to bring material grist to the individual mills which grind day in and night out to produce moneyed influence for their owners—all these pursuits are woefully neglected in the frenzied rush to acquire a larger income than one's neighbor.

The latest impeachment of Columbus is that he was a sea rover and buccaneer; he cut off the hands and feet of his captives; he was a slave trader, and his thirst for gold was unappeasable. In other words he was the seaman of the Fifteenth and not of the Nineteenth century. The explorers of a century later would fit this description almost equally. Drake, Frobisher and Hawkins were buccaneers; bounced the Spanish Main for silver and gold, made slaves of their captives, and practiced numerous things which the Nineteenth century has cast aside as belonging to the cruelty and wrongs of feudalism.

There is much too little chivalry among lawyers for the good of their profession. Worse still, what there is is discouraged and discredited as much as possible. A lawyer who regards his legal training as imposing upon him duties to prevent or expose wrongs is too commonly considered visionary and quixotic. Possibly this may sometimes be the fact. Even then is it better than a policy of selfish indifference, that may prove more profitable and more promotive of personal ease. It needs a brave heart and an unconquerable will that friends can give to sustain a lawyer who has undertaken this difficult task, and this at least should not be withheld from any who seem disposed to recognize that they have duties to the public as well as to their paid clients and to their own purses.

Like fire, electricity is a good servant, but a terrible master. It is the age of electricity. The fluid, as it is still called, is harnessed and used everywhere. It is a motor for working engines. It is a messenger for the instant transmission of the human voice to long distances, and agent for the quick conveyance of messages. Used for artificial illumination it is carried into private homes as well as public places. Produced by different means, it is conducted by wires. The lightning strokes has long been man of its deadly quality and has prompted science to make use of it as an executioner. Its dangerous quality fully known, every corporation generating and distributing this terrible agency ought to exercise the utmost care to prevent its becoming a menace to human life. The art which employs it for useful purposes is, equal to the task of rendering it by complete isolation of wires, entirely safe. But care entails expense and the clamor for dividends leads to criminal recklessness.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS IN A BRIEF RESUME.

A Young New Yorker Shoots His Sister's Betrayer in a Court Room.—Halfour Nearly Hobbed.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Max Clergett, 18 years old, was shot and instantly killed in part 1 of the court of general sessions yesterday by Edward Divens. Clergett had been arraigned before Judge Martine on the charge of raping Divens' 15-year old sister, Sarah, on the 11th instant and had pleaded guilty. He was remanded for sentence until next Thursday and as he turned and walked through the aisle to go to the prisoner's pen young Divens arose and holding a self-cocking derringer to Clergett's breast fired before a hand could be outstretched to restrain him.

Clergett fell on the broad of his back dead. For an instant there was not another sound in the room. The smoke from the pistol mounted in the air, Divens stood over his victim, a look of hate on his face and his revolver pointed down at the motionless figure on the floor. The police awoke first from their lethargy and jumped for the murderer. He made no resistance and was led into the hall. Then he became hysterical and cried aloud for his sister. He was taken before a coroner, who committed him at once. Then he was taken to the Tombs prison but on the way to prison he continued to call for "Sarah, Sarah, Sarah," the dead man's victim.

Clergett's body was taken to the morgue, where an autopsy was made. The bullet cut clean through his heart. Death was instantaneous. General sympathy is expressed for Divens whose brain is thought to have been turned by the ruin of his sister, who was his pet and favorite. He has always been sick and paralytic, the muscles of his right side being seriously affected. He gave his age as 25 years.

A Disgraceful Affair in London.

LONDON, June 28.—Advices from all parts of the country show that the electoral campaign is opening amid the greatest excitement. Mr. Balfour arrived at Sheffield yesterday to address an open air meeting. The conservative agents, expecting disorder, instructed the police to take precautions to protect the meeting and to prevent organized opposition to the meeting. Fifteen thousand persons were present at the meeting. At the beginning of his speech Mr. Balfour was continually greeted with cheers and groans. Finally he expressed regret for the deplorable accident that had occurred to Mr. Hladstone, and then turned from the roar to increase and finally the noise became so great that Mr. Balfour could be heard by even those on the reporters. The crowd made several attempts to rush upon the platform, and the police pressed back the rushing mass with difficulty in repulsing them. Women screamed to the top of their voices, fearing that they would be trampled to death by the howling crowd. Several of them were extricated in a fainting condition. Subsequently the speeches were as brief as it was possible to make them and the meeting terminated in the wildest disorder. Mr. Balfour was rescued by police from the crowd.

LOWERED THE FLAG.

Finnish Vessels Compelled to Fly Russian Colors Before Entering Lubeck Harbor.

BERLIN, June 28.—It has long been the custom of ships when entering the port of Lubeck to fly the German flag out of compliment to the German empire. The Russians have had some reason of late to believe that the motive for this courtesy is case of vessels from Finland, which is part of the Russian Empire, was not always merely one of compliment, and that the Finns wished the Germans to understand that they preferred German rule to Russian rule. Therefore the Russian consul at Lubeck boarded the Finnish steamer Hebe as it was entering the port with the German flag flying and demanded that the captain lower the German colors and run up the Russian colors in their place. The Finnish captain of the Hebe demurred, saying it would look like an insult on his part to the German authorities. The Russian consul thereupon threatened that unless the captain complied he would be punished on his return to Russian jurisdiction. The captain decided to obey, and the German flag came down and the Russian flag went up in its place. All Finnish vessels now entering Lubeck harbor are treated in a similar manner.

A bill was passed subjecting to homestead law the public lands undisposed of within the Fort Peck Fetterman hay reservation in wood reserve in Wyoming. After disposing of some bills on the calendar the Senate spent the three subsequent days in the free silver bill. Mr. Perkins made a speech against the bill. Several other members also spoke on the bill and adjournment was taken without action. HOUSE.—The Senate bill was passed extending to the port of St. Augustine, Fla., the provisions of the act of June 19, 1886, as to the remission of dutiable goods, went into committee of the whole on the general deficiency bill. When the committee rose, a roll call disclosed that there was no quorum, and the House adjourned.

SENATE.—After passing several bills on the 23d, among them to appropriate $50,000 for the Sherman pedestal, there took place quite a discussion on the resolution introduced by Mr. Morgan for the printing of additional copies of the report of the committee on foreign relations on the Nicaragua canal. The agricultural appropriation bill was then taken up, and, without taking a vote thereon, the Senate adjourned. HOUSE.—The interest in the Chicago contest prevented a quorum from being present and no business was transacted.

SENATE.—The entire session on the 27th was taken up with appropriation bills in order to get them through before the close of the fiscal year. To this end practically the whole day was given to the legislative, executive and judicial bill, which provides for the salaries and ordinary expenses of Congress and of all the legislative and judicial branches of the government. Considerable progress was made in its consideration. All the senate committee amendments (which increased the aggregate amount $350,000) were agreed to, except one which was reported for further discussion. This was the amendment reinstating the Utah commission, which the House had abolished. Mr. Stewart, of Nevada, indicating that his belief that his pending free coinage bill still has some chance of passage by submitting an amendment to its text, to be printed and called up when consideration of the bill is resumed. STRUCK BY A WOMAN.

Gladstone, the Great Liberalist, Receives a Malicious Blow in the Eye.

London cable: While Mr. Gladstone was driving through Chester to attend a meeting of a Liberal club some one threw an object that struck him near the eye. The Right Honorable was not grazed at first and he announced that he would go on and attend the meeting. As he proceeded the crowd that had gathered cheered him lustily. It was ascertained that the guilty person is a woman, and that the missile with which she emptied was a large piece of hard gingerbread. The gingerbread was thrown with considerable force and struck Mr. Gladstone on the nose, just beneath the left eye, and then glanced upward, grazing the left gentleman's eye and striking him on the temple. Mr. Gladstone endured great discomfort throughout his drive to the place where the meeting was held. When he arrived at the headquarters of the club two doctors made an examination and found that the injured eye was considerably inflamed and that the skin on the nose was grazed. They succeeded in moderating the pain. In spite of the disagreeable incident Mr. Gladstone made a spirited speech which was applauded throughout, and at its close the speaker received an ovation.

OPPOSE ANTI-OPTION.

Delegation of New York Brokers Leave for Washington to Fight It.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The principal question in the minds of the produce and cotton exchange members to-day was the departure of the New York brokers who are to appear before the senate committee on agriculture in Washington in opposition to the Hatch anti-option bill. President Evan Thomas of the produce exchange is the chief of the delegation of business men would endeavor to convince the Judiciary committee that the proposed law is unconstitutional. He does not think the bill will ever pass. In fact, many of his associates have established strong hopes all along that the legal questions involved were such that an adverse report would be made to the Senate.

Weekly Review of Trade.

NEW YORK, June 28.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade: Another week has passed the country with great improvement to the growing crops. In what at great a change of condition appears that in the early part of the week of the third this year will not closely approximate the average good crop of 1891. But if the grain and cotton the outlook is decidedly better and there is reason now to hope for highly satisfactory results from the year's agriculture. In consequence there is stronger trade throughout the country, especially at western centers of distribution. The improvement is less marked at the south, for with the very large yield of cotton and continued high water in some regions, the farmers are slow in regard to the wage dispute in the iron manufacture operations for the present to cause increased trade, while in the great industries this situation is clearly more favorable than usual. Some unnecessary fears have has been much strengthened by political events, and silver is declined to 87½d per ounce. In every part of the country money is in abundant supply, and the demand at nearly all points is only moderate, collections being generally quite satisfactory for the season. The failures occurring during throughout the country during the last seven days number 190. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 234.

First World's Fair Exhibit.

MR. HARRISON OBJECTS

THEREFORE MR. CLARKSON WILL NOT SERVE

As Chairman of the National Republican Committee.—J. Campbell, of Illinois, Selected Instead.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—It was 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning when the meeting of the Republican National committee was called to order by the temporary chairman, Gen. J. S. Clarkson. After the roll had been called showing the presence, either in person or by proxy, of a majority of the committee except those from Nevada, Wyoming and Oklahoma, J. Sloat Fassett, of New York, took the floor and placed in nomination for permanent chairman of the committee Gen. J. S. Clarkson.

Mr. Fassett's remarks were several times interrupted by applause and it was hearty and enthusiastic when reference was made to Mr. Clarkson's service early in the campaign of 1888. As Mr. Fassett took His seat, Gen. Clarkson arose and said that although a majority of the members of the committee had tendered him their support and votes he had it from the President that he would prefer some other person in the position. He (Mr. Clarkson) believed it would be for the best interest of the party to place in the chair some one who was recommended by the candidates for president and vice-president. After a recess a committee was appointed to draft resolutions on the labors of Mr. Clarkson as chairman. James F. Burke, of the University of Michigan, president of the College League of Republican clubs, made an address which was well received.

Mr. Payne, of Wisconsin, placed in nomination as chairman of the Republican National committee William Campbell, of Illinois. Representatives of several other states seconded the nomination as one eminently fit, and proper and predicting under his leadership complete success for the Republican party in November. Mr. Campbell was elected by acclamation.

RIOTERS DISARM POLICE.

Belgium Socialists Institute a New Order of Things.

BRUSSELS, June 28.—A number of socialists of this city who were returning from an excursion last night marched through the streets singing and acting noisily. The police ordered them to disperse, but the Socialists refused to do so and the police charged the party. In the conflict that ensued the police were overpowered and their clubs were taken away from them. A number of the socialists armed themselves with clubs, their own weapons in the hands of the rioters. The civic guards were called out to suppress the rioting and they dispersed the mob in short time. Several of the more prominent rioters were arrested.
