According to Nikola Tesla, the electrician, the new discovery of electrical lamps will largely increase the possibilities of electric lighting. Among these possibilities he mentions electric lamps operated without any wires at all, an inexhaustible store of electrical energy to tap everywhere without need of generation or transmission, and a light at least twenty times more brilliant than that now known.
Quill pens are still much in use in Great Britain. A tradition exists in that country that those who do not write with a quill pen are a quill. A similar tradition exists in parts of New England, and it is notable that Gov. Russell of Massachusetts follows the precedent of his predecessors in signing all legislative bills with a new quill pen—used once for that purpose and never again.
The Berlin fire department is experimenting with a novel fire engine. The engine is constructed entirely of metal, and all the different parts (the body, wheels, poles, etc., being finished in the same metal). The weight and power of the engine is increased by the use of a metal, the weight of which is much less. This lightness is, of course, of marked advantage, since it allows the engine to reach the scene of the fire with unusual dispatch.

THE POWER REQUIRED.
The drummer had been in the town from morning until night, and he had had his copy of the Detroit Free Press. He was in the evening he was on the platform waiting for a train to go to another town. "I know it but see motive that could ever bring me such as this," he said, "I have never seen anything like this before."
The other man showed evidence of doubt for his experience was no more than a "what's that?" he inquired.
"No motive," said the drummer, "it is simply a matter of fact, and it is not a mystery at all."—Detroit Free Press.

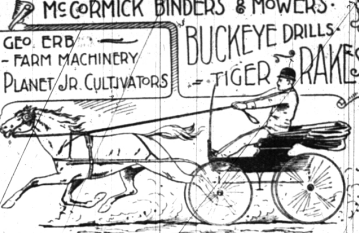

MOVING UPWARD.
The history of political parties shows that the differences of men are not irreconcilable. Content of host opinion bring reconciliation. The differences are not giving. There are divisions in the church universal, but not great gaps as in the world. The spirit of the law of God and man permeates the church as it grows before. The way of the world is forward and upward.
A Novel Event.
Professor Lora, the Greek philosopher, is attracting much attention by his method of shooting a class full of iron lead. The trick is performed by shooting at the trigger of a rifle from which the iron lead is attached to a glass ball dangling by a string directly over the marksmen's head.
Pulsing Base by Electricity.
The electric motor is now applied to the base of a lamp. The lamp is fastened to a shaper fixed upon the shaft of a motor. As the latter revolves the brush is applied to the base which is thus quickly polished.
