ONE DAY OF WAITING.

PROVED SUFFICIENT FOR THE UNLUCKY WAITER.

Behind a Lunch Counter—Anxious for a Job the Young Man Hires Himself to Stand Behind the Bar and Serve Out Pies and Milk, But Comes to Grief.

It looked easy enough and in my innocence, alias ignorance, I thought it was. It did not appear to require an enormous amount of muscular force, nor, above all, to demand more than a minimum of brains. That suited me to a tee. Pecuniary troubles had begun to burden my mind the more as my purse became lean that it was easy enough, and then there was $7 per week in it and table board. Therefore I determined a waiter at a bar I would be.

I singled out the manager of a large city cafe and tackled for a job, says a Chicago Herald writer. He asked me if I had had experience as a waiter and I answered in the affirmative, with intent to deceive. He liked my looks and engaged me. Promptly at 6 the next morning I was on hand and attiring myself in my white coat took my place behind the bar and was initiated into the mysteries of the chock system. Then I was left to my own devices and watched some of my colleagues wiping off the counter with wet cloths.

Soon the head waiter came rushing up and wanted to know what the inferno I was standing there loafing for, any way. I politely explained that as I was a new comer I was getting accustomed to the place gradually—a sort of getting acclimated as it were. "Acclimated, sheol!" he remarked, with evident emotion and strode away, delivering a commandment and strewing the powder in his wake.

Everything was now prepared for the rush. Each waiter had a certain portion of the bar to look after and soon all had their hands full. Such articles as they had not to hand they called aloud for, designating themselves by the several numbers that were their noms de guerre. The noise began as the first of the noon patrons came in, in a subdued murmur of "Ham sandwich, numb! fish, 'dror one," "doughnut, numb' sick." The murmur gained in force and volume as the throng of luncheers grew in density, and when they were slammed up and waiting, three deep, behind the stools, pandemonium had come indeed. Shrieks, howls, yells, execrations, prayers, wails, groans, cries and pleas for cash and coffee, salads and strawberries, ice cream and pie, rent the air incessantly. A blind man at a little distance might have supposed some horrible outrage were being enacted and blessed his infirmity for saving him the full horror of it. Crockery rattled, spoons, knives and forks jingled, the white-coated waiters flashed to and fro and the eaters grumbled and swore because their services lacked eyes like spiders and arms like octopi.

"Hatter-hatter-hatter-clack," went the dishes. "Ringle-ingle-ingle-ingle-ing" went the plated-ware. "Chis' seal 'dropsawichetsbeaf-platesdroreone!" shouted No. 3. Rattle-attle-battle-clattle attle-clash!" went a stack of plates from the grasp of some disordered waiter. "Eggsbap, appelpieceteaspoonswanteddroreone!" yelled No. 2. "Ringle-ringle-jingle-jingle-jing!" went a new relay of spoons. "Hatter-hatter-hatter-clack-plates trawber' bakedbeansglassbutt' milkdrorchocuitdroreone!;" shrieked No. 1. "Ringle-jingle-clatter-clack-attle-clattle-jingle and clack-jingle-ingle-jing!" went the accompaniment.

These things excited me greatly. I rushed hither and thither and emulated the exuberant actions of the others, but somehow or other I didn't seem to have the knack and nothing came of it, but I served out bread and glasses of ice water to everyone. The bread and butter I seemed to be my forte and I was beginning to grow quite proud of this achievement when a gentleman addressed some invidious remarks to me through a highly sarcastic nose in the course of which he asked if I thought I was dealing out rations at Cherry Hill. I disposed of him in short order—told him to go get his face fixed. He seemed much abashed.

My other clients, however, now rebelled, swore at me and applied epithets to me which I returned at a usurious rate of interest.

While gilding over the floor, well lubricated with spilt milk and bread after more bread and water, the earth suddenly changed its equilibrium and came in contact with me so forcibly that I saw into the farthest recesses of the starry universe where undreamed-of suns, moons and solar systems cavorted in a drunken dance in regions not yet mapped. Some knives and forks made a plumb line from my hands towards the zenith, and I am firmly convinced that they penetrated the ceiling and roof and are at present leading a vagrant existence out in space as comets or meteors or something. I arose and served more water and bread and partook in more mutual abuse, and finally quitting time came.

As I went out I stopped at the cashier's desk and was told that my services were no longer required. I remonstrated and tried to explain, but it was useless. It seemed the gentleman at the cigar counter to whom I had counseled to have the features revised was none other than the proprietor of the establishment himself.

Japanese Peasant Hats.

All the young women in an art school do their studying in summer under the shade of Japanese peasant hats. These are mere disks of loosely plaited straw about two feet wide and two feet deep. They have no peak nor crown and are just as suitable for use as table mats as for anything else. To make hats of them it is only necessary to sew a ribbon to one surface of them, leaving its two ends free to tie under the chin as bonnet strings. Thus they become hat and parasol in one. Several bird hunters in this city have bought Japanese rain cloaks and rain hats, which are covered with thick fringes of dried grass, that are said to shed water perfectly.—New York Sun.

"Belgian" Block Quarried in America.

Anyone asked where the Belgian block comes from would say, "Why, from Belgium, of course," but this is far from the truth. Great quarries at a point four miles above Sellersville, Buck county, known as the "Rocks," supply most of the blocks used in this city. A great piece of rock was recently blasted there from which were cut 55,000 Belgian blocks of regulation size. The rock was thirty-five feet wide, twelve and one-half feet deep and sixty-five feet long. The blocks cut up will realize nearly $1,500 for the quarryman.—Philadelphia Record.

YOUR HEAD TO THE NORTH.

The Proper Way to Sleep According to Some Medical Authorities.

There appears to be foundation for the idea that sleeping with the head pointed northward is beneficial. many people claim to have been benefited by observing the rule, and a London editor is quoted by the Brooklyn Eagle as saying recently: "Years ago I suffered from nervous irritation and consequent loss of sleep. I fancied that I slept better in some rooms than in others and, after trying to ascertain why, came to the conclusion that a great deal depended upon the position of the bed. For twenty-five years I have had my bed placed with the head to the north, or as near that point as I can get, and I have found great advantage in doing so." In 1881 a writer in the Revue Philosophique said: "In there been, an agency capable of exercising a continuous action on the apparatus of the nerves, varying with the position of the head? To my mind this agency exists and is nothing else than terrestrial magnetism. It is beyond dispute that galvanic currents exercise a powerful effect on our nervous system, but that electro magnets themselves produce marked effects in certain nervous affections." To this the author adds the note: I have this fact from M. Nordstrom, Swedish consul at Alger. Dr. Julius Von dem Fischweiler, a physician at Madgeburg, who died lately, asserts in his will that his own great age (103 years) is to be attributed entirely to his constant habit of sleeping with his head to the north." Probably the benefits to be derived from the position of one's bed are chiefly imaginary, but many persons have tried it and testify to a sense of benefit from the change to that position from previous practice. One eminent physician said on this subject: "My opinion is that it is a piece of nonsense worthy of some superstitious old lady. I would rank it with fortune telling and table wrapping." Hindoos, Russians and Japanese are opposed to sleeping with their heads to the north, but their objections are based on superstitious grounds.

COAL DUST EXPLOSIONS.

Difficult to Produce Artificially, But Due to Oxygen and Heat.

In the course of a lecture recently by Professor Harold B. Dixon, of the Owens college, Manchester, on "Coal and Coal Mining," he directed attention to the evidence which has been accumulated regarding the action of finely divided coal dust either in producing or aggravating the violence of explosions produced by fire, or, on the other hand, igniting itself and causing an explosion in mines, says the Scientific American.

He said the question which was being considered was this: Is dust capable of creating a flame when it comes in contact with a large flame such as that produced by the shot or shot or by an explosion of gas and air? It was not supposed that an ordinary naked light in a mine would suffice for the ignition of coal dust and air. There must be first a great disturbance to raise the dust, and mingle it with the air, to make it an explosive mixture; and there must be a great heat locally applied to initiate the explosion.

But when once this had been set up, a flame might extend so far as there was fine dust lying on the floor or sides, and the damage done by it was comparable, at all events, by that caused by an explosion of fire-damp and air. This was a view frequently urged, and, in support of it, the lecturer tried a few experiments. He showed that fine dust falling on a flame put out the flame and sparks, and that when mixed with oxygen an intense flame is produced. The difficulty, he added, was to obtain sufficiently propertions of coal dust and air to make the explosive mixture.

Her Point of View.

Miss Upton of New York—One does not mind running across to Europe now a bit.

Miss Hill, of Brooklyn, a feminine view—When are you coming over to see me, dear?

Miss Upton—Oh, dear, I don't know. You live so far away.

His Fate.

Miss Laura—Oh, auntie! You remember Mr. Meeker who went from here as a missionary? I have just heard that those awful cannibals ate him.

Aunt Sophronia—La, me! I do hope they cooked him with turnips. The poor dear man was so fond of turnips.

A stump orator wanted the wings of a bird, to fly to every village and hamlet in the broad land, but he collapsed when a man in the crowd sang out: "You'd get shot for a goose before you flew a mile."

At a recent wedding of a fashionable Christian couple in New York city the "Chuppah" of the Jewish ritual was used in the service. The marriage took place under a canopy of white satin supported by four pillars.

"Jack, the Hair Cutter," is a new fiend that is causing little children and young girls with long and beautiful hair considerable trouble in the Eastern district, Brooklyn. During the last three months at regular intervals this man has robbed the school children of their hair.

From 1830 to 1856 there came to this country 4,212,634 immigrants, of whom about 3,500,000 came in sailing vessels, while the others were mere visitors or sojourners. During the thirty-six years, 1856-92, the number of immigrants was 18,567,000, or 12,371,959, so that altogether during the century 16,000,000 aliens have arrived in the United States.

Among the many Russian articles of use and beauty now imported to this country are girdles for feminine waists. They are, like most Russian ornaments, gorgeous to the last degree. The girdle itself is made of cloth woven with threads of gold or silver. The buckle is usually a large metallic affair bedizened with Byzantine decoration.

WATKINS LAKE.

All quiet on the camp ground, no one there but the Durkee family (except a band of Pontiac boy sin Mr. Stowells' woods. They are very nice boys. They have a row boat and sail boat which the Blakeslee boys have enjoyed with them very much. Last Saturday morning they wounded a loon and Bert Blakeslee grabbed it by the neck. The boys have it tied by one leg with a long cord so all can see it. It will dive farther under water than George Mitchell can.

We enjoyed very much having Mr. Brooks and son Frank up here and Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Kittie Alger who were up one day.

Miss Mary Eckstein and brother Martin with their sister Mrs. Zellner, visited their sister Lena Eckstein one day last week.

Mr. Dan Bassett's family, Miss Jennie Keyes, Louise Smith and several others were here last week so we are not lonesome, although we were very sorry when we saw old Brownie going over the hill with the other good people.

Frank Durkee is very thankful for the fish bait Mr. Whitehead brought him, but supposed it was for Mr. Brooks 'till Whitey was gone and Mr. Durkee thinks of Whitey by day and dreams of him at night.

Blakeslee's family, Grandpa Durkee and the kitten all go home this week.

General Order No. 5, dated July 24th, issued from Department Headquarters G. A. R., Department of Ohio, names the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad as the official route to Indianapolis and also notices that this road was the only road which granted the department a one-cent per mile rate to their State Encampment at Hamilton.

The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad is the G. A. R. route and other lines will fall short in endeavoring to catch the old veterans by falling in the road. The old boys, as they were trained in battle, believe in going with advance Guard.

First-class Single and Double Rigs.

I have recently purchased for my Undertaking Business at considerable expense one of Troy-lor's Improved Ice Coolers for preserving bodies. This method keeps them in perfect contact with the remains and does away with the old way of embalming, poisoning and mutilating the body.
