GHOUSTRIES OF ARMY LIFE

How Newly Acquired Rank Was Lost

Notwithstanding the fact that the officers of the American army have the very pink of courtesy, they sometimes in post and garden life, have very unpleasant social experiences, says the Outlook. An officer in a garden is assigned quarters, not according to the necessity of his family, but in accordance with his rank. Therefore, some officers who are sent to post, that there are many changes of quarters so as to make room for him. When a new man arrives, for instance, he selects the quarters that suit him best. The man who occupies them, provided the occupant is below him in rank. He can turn out at a moment's notice on the list or any captain or lieutenant, and each of those who are disposed can choose for himself what quarters suit him best if occupied by an inferior in rank. One more, therefore, may make a dozen others of the women of the army, it is said, are great critics of those rights that the men themselves, with their superior rank, possess of highest courtesy, sometimes push their authority to its fullest limit. For instance, at a two-company post in the West some years ago, a captain of Infantry was in command. His commission was dated later than that of the captain of cavalry also there. These two captains were mutually antagonistic. In their official intercourse all the forms were observed, and all was plain to all. The cavalry captain ordered the infantry captain to take a horse from the forest and cut the wood needed for the winter. This duty ordinarily would have been given to a sergeant or a corporal. The cavalry captain had no recourse and was obliged to obey. Just as he got outside the post the mail, which came only now and then, brought a letter from a woman or a girl. One of these brought him the commission of a woman at a post, and she was a sergeant. The cavalry captain, who was a sergeant, was a sergeant. The cavalry captain, who was a sergeant, was a sergeant.
