PURE BLOOD

Is absolutely necessary in order to have good health. The greatest affliction of the human race is impure blood.

There are about 500 diseases that can be traced to the human frame, the large majority arising from the impure or poisonous condition of the blood.

The best remedy for all blood diseases is found in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Its remarkable cures are its loudest praise. It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

No medicine has ever had so marked success, or won such enormous sales.

Scrofula, in its severest forms yields to its potent powers, blood poisoning and salt rheum and many other diseases are permanently cured by it. For a general tonic, Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequaled. Those impurities which have accumulated during the winter, or to overcome That Tired Feeling, nothing equals

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

A PARROT STORY.

Which Proves Conclusively That Parrots Are Brainy Birds.

Who that has ever owned a parrot with brains would doubt for a moment the truth of this tale? asks Life's Caledar.

Ben Lusbie, who for fifteen years was one of the principal features of Barnum's circus in the capacity of a "lightning ticket seller," had a wonderful parrot, which had been presented to him by one of the canvasmen of the show, who was at one time a sailor on a steamer plying between Boston and Fernandino, in the Bahamas.

Lusbie used to have a way of quieting the scrambling mob of ticket purchasers around the ticket wagon by saying: "Don't be in a hurry, gentlemen." "There's plenty of time." "Don't crowd each other." "One at a time, gentlemen," and such like expressions. The parrot usually sat perched upon a safe in the wagon just back of Lusbie, got to learn these little speeches after a season's tour, and often broke out in a piercing squawk with one of them, much to Lusbie's amusement.

The parrot, which was quite a little vagabond, broke loose from her fetters one day, and flew over into a neighboring wood near the circus grounds.

A searching party was made up and they had not proceeded far before they heard a vast racket, apparently made by squawking birds. Hastening to the scene they found poor Poll singing at the best she could to the limb of a dead tree, surrounded by a screaming flock of crows. The parrot had only two or three tail feathers left, and the hoodlin crows were striking, pecking, and plucking her right and left. Hanging on as best she could, the parrot was shrilly screaming: "One at a time, gentlemen." "Don't crowd there!" "Take your time!" "There's plenty more left!"

Passengers Pushed the Car.

The motor of a De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn, trolley car refused to work the other night at the foot of the intersection near Stuyvesant street. One impatient passenger suggested that they push the car up the hill and let it run down the other side without the trouble. All hands then got out and shoved the car to the top of the hill. Then they scrambled aboard and away the car went down the hill at a lively pace. When it reached the bottom the motor was again put in working order and the car went along as usual.

He Was Weighted.

They hadn't been married very long and were out skating.

"John," she said in a tone of extreme solicitude, "whatever you do, be careful not to go near one of those air-holes."

"Oh, it wouldn't be very serious. I can swim under water."

"I don't believe you could now. You know you ate a lot of that bread the new girl made, and if you get into the water you'll sink to the bottom and stay there, sure."

He Prared, Too.

Hostess—I have been told that the Russians never touch food or drink without making the sign of the cross. Traveler—Well, there are some Russian drinks and a good many Russian dishes that I would not touch without making the sign of the cross and saying my prayers, too.—New York Weekly.
