The agricultural land Texas leads in the great states in the production of products. Cotton, corn and the cereals grow and are raised in every portion of the state and in the central and southern portions grain and sorghum crops are profitably cultivated.

The Gulf Coast two of three crops of vegetables are raised each year. Berries are shipped six weeks in advance of the home crop in the north. Parsnips, peaches, plums, oranges, and other fruits are raised abundantly and can be had from the Gulf Coast.

Large quantities of rice are now grown in the delta of the Mississippi river, and the settler desires to secure a farm near the water, and one that is reasonably profitable. If he wants a better price for his produce, he should go to Texas, where the soil is rich and the climate is healthy. He should go to Texas, where the soil is rich and the climate is healthy.
